Senate Votes Against High Farm Price Supports

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

The Senate yesterday reversed its action of Tuesday and voted to discard the present high price supports for farm products in favor of a sliding scale of from 75 to 90 percent of parity.

The vote of 45 to 26 came after a day-long battle that saw both party lines shattered. The close of the row came with Majority Leader Scott W. Lucas (D., Ill.) delivering a blast that observers interpreted as aimed at both the White House and Vice President Barkley.

When the measure was voted on Tuesday, Barkley broke a 37-to-37 tie by voting in favor of retaining rigid price supports at 90 percent of parity. He explained that he had pledged himself to that during the 1948 Presidential campaign.

Barkley's vote was contrary to that of the majority leader, and also against President Truman's former Secretary of Agriculture, Senator Clinton P. Anderson (D., N. Mex.), author of the bill seeking lower supports.

Look at Message Suggested

At his Thursday press conference, President Truman parried a question as to which side he favored, by suggesting that the questioners read his message on the subject.

Many Senators yesterday accepted that as approval by the White House of Barkley's vote for high supports. Such an interpretation was made on the floor by Senator Glen H. Taylor (D., Idaho) and was not contradicted.

Just before the vote on the issue yesterday, Lucas opened up.

"I've heard some Democrats here talk about carrying out our platform as adopted at Philadelphia," he began. "I want you to hear what we said in that platform."

Lucas Reads Excerpt

Lucas then read the following excerpt from the platform:

"We pledge our efforts to maintain continued farm prosperity, improvement of the standard of living and the working condition of the farmer, and to preserve the family-size farm."

Lucas raised his voice to a shout as he read the following paragraph:

"Specifically, we favor a permanent system of flexible price

Whitehurst Freeway Opening Set for Today

Washington's $3,200,000 Whitehurst Freeway, designed to speed upper northwest and Virginia traffic to and from the downtown area, will be given a grand opening today at 2 p. m.

A ceremony will be held at 27th st. and Rock Creek pkwy., the eastern terminus of the mile-long structure, with speeches by George V. Graham, chairman, District Board of Trade Highway Committee; Charles M. Upham, engineer-director of the American Roadbuilders Association, and city officials.

After the ribbon across the roadway is cut by the granddaughter of the late Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, Director of Highways, for whom the expressway is named, a motorcade will proceed along the Freeway and Key Bridge to Rosslyn plaza. There the Arlington Chamber of Commerce will sponsor a brief program.

During the programs, several bands will provide music and a unit of the District Air National Guard will fly overhead. After the ceremonies traffic will be permitted.

The structure was begun on July 7, 1947, but was delayed by a shortage of steel, then strikes by carpenters, laborers and concrete workers.

Ebbets Field, Brooklyn, Oct. 7.—Three times the Dodgers pumped home runs into the left field seats today, but at the finish the scoreboard showed the doleful news for 32,788 Brooklyn fans: "Yankees, 4; Dodgers, 3."

The Yankees won this third game of the World Series by blowing the contest wide open in a three-run ninth that ended what had been a 1-1 stalemate between pitchers Joe Page and Ralph Branca.

No home runs did the Yankees hit, but they capitalized on Branca's wildness and packed three of their five hits into the ninth inning to give Page the three-run cushion he needed to get past Brooklyn's own ninth.

Pinch hitter Johnny Mize delivered the Yankees' two big runs in the ninth with a long single off the right field screen, and a bit later Gerry Coleman whacked in a third run with a single.

At that point Page was the undisputed hero of the Yankees' cast. He had moved into the game to

Czechs Jailed by Thousands In Roundups by Red Police

Prague, Oct. 7 (AP).—Prague was a capital gripped by fear tonight. Mysterious police roundups had landed between 3500 and 5000 persons in jail.

The police drive started in the city and its suburbs without explanation Tuesday night and left the man in the street with a bad case of jitters.

Many of those arrested were small business men, handicraft workers, doctors and lawyers. The Communist Deputy Mayor of Prague was reported arrested. Some policemen were said to have been fired because they have Yugoslav wives.

There were reports, some confirmed and others unconfirmed, of shootings.

U. S. Student Jailed, Freed

While raids were on in force, an American student reported he had been jailed September 29 as a spy suspect and then released five days later.

The arrest of the student, Savel Kliachko, 26, Palo Alto, Calif., did not appear related to the Prague campaign.

Kliachko said he was picked up in the town of Michalovce while on an officially approved tour of Slovakia. He was not mistreated, he said, but was kept in solitary confinement, fed "slops" and had to sleep on straw.

Security police who arrested him were quoted as saying: "Why don't you admit you are a spy and save us a lot of trouble?"

A student at Columbia University's School of International Affairs, he came to Prague last summer to study at Charles University on a scholarship given by the Czech government.

The Prague press reported the government will take over control of all churches November 1.

The government's church control bill will become law that day, said the newspaper Svobodne Slovo. It applies to all denominations, but is most bitterly opposed by the Roman Catholic Church.

People in virtually every section of town told of the arrest of

German Reds Set Up Regime In East Zone

Berlin, Oct. 7 (AP).—Germany today became an officially divided nation of two governments and two capitals.

The Russians hit back at the West German Republic at Bonn by creating a government of their own in the ruins of Hitler's Nazi headquarters in East Berlin.

A group of Communists and hand-picked sympathizers making up the People's Council appointed themselves the government for the 20 million Germans in the Soviet zone. They claimed power over all Germany. They passed a law to legalize the regime.

A 20-point manifesto was adopted, obviously linking German territory east of the Elbe River with Moscow and the Cominform satellite states.

A constitution of pointed Communist doctrine was declared in force.

A government of a chancellor (prime minister), three deputies and 14 ministries, headed by foreign affairs, was ordained.

Otto Grotewohl, cochairman of the Socialist Unity (Communist) Party, was unanimously elected chancellor. The other appointments were left to a president, to be named later. Grotewohl is a former Socialist who joined up with the Russians when they forced a merger of the Social Democrats and Communists in 1946.

The People's Council is a body of more than 400 Communists and sympathizers set up last May in a single-ticket zonal election. A

Surgeons May Employ Radar To Locate Foreign Objects

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

Radar, which directs ships at sea, may someday direct the surgeon's knife to gallstones and other objects foreign to the human body.

Navy medical researchers, it was announced last night, have turned the radar principle into a new technique for detection of objects within soft tissues of the body invisible to X-rays.

The announcement only noted success in trials on animals, but disclosed that a final instrument is now being constructed for human experiments. Intensity of the energy used doesn't harm living tissue, it was said.

The new method was developed at the Naval Medical Research Institute at Bethesda, Md., by Dr. George D. Ludwig. Dr. Ludwig, now on inactive Naval duty at Massachusetts General Hospital, Boston, used a war-standard radar tracking device to prove the clinical possibilities.

Using high-frequency sound waves, just like those used to track airplanes from the ground, the investigators found they could detect and pinpoint gallstones, bone splinters, glass slivers and other foreign objects in animal tissues—and

Big Strikes Threaten To Spread

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

There were ominous indications yesterday that the national strikes in steel and coal will soon spread to other industries.

Aluminum workers, steel products fabricators, electrical workers, railroad firemen and enginemen threatened walkouts, some by mid-October.

Federal mediators met yesterday with the leaders of the strike-bound soft coal industry and the United Mine Workers, but after a full day of talks could offer not a ray of sunshine through the gloomy overcast.

Stressed Gravity

"We impressed the parties as forcibly as we could with the gravity of the situation confronting the Nation by reason of the coal dispute," Cyrus S. Ching, director of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service, told reporters following the day-long sessions with John L. Lewis and the representatives of coal management.

At Ching's request, the coal disputants agreed to continue talks among themselves for the next week, at which time, if no progress is reported, further mediation sessions will be held.

With 400,000 soft coal miners on strike for improved working conditions and welfare benefits, with 500,000 CIO Steelworkers on strike for welfare benefits to be financed solely by management, it was estimated that around 1,250,000 workers all told were idle yesterday. The nonstrikers among the idle include those laid off for lack of work or materials in the railroads and auto manufacturing plants.

Set for October 17

The CIO Steelworkers, who struck the basic steel plants last Saturday morning, plan to pull out some 500,000 members in the steel fabrication plants, when present contracts run out beginning October 15. The issue is the same: noncontributory pensions.

Yesterday, the Steelworkers Union announced that its members would strike nine plants of the Aluminum Company of America on October 17, unless the aluminum industry comes through with what the steel industry refuses to give: pensions and social insurance financed exclusively by the companies. The Alcoa plants

Navy Air Bureau First Unit in City To Hit Chest Goal

The Navy's Bureau of Aeronautics yesterday became the first unit in the city to announce fulfillment of its quota in the 1949 Community Chest campaign.

Aiming at a quota of $13,469, Rear Admiral A. M. Pride, chairman of the bureau's chest drive, announced that the bureau had collected more than $13,500 by closing time yesterday. All of the bureau's more than 2500 employes had pledged contributions and more funds are expected to roll in.

Bureau sources said that the unit had determined to become the first to go over the top this year. Last year, the bureau went over the top, but it was the second unit in Washington to do so.

The Community Chest is out to raise $3,991,719 in Greater Washington this year.

Sesqui Fund Of 3 Million Gets Backing

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

A congressional conference committee yesterday approved a three-million dollar appropriation for launching next year's National Capital Sesquicentennial Celebration.

Also approved by the conference group was a $100,000 fund for financing operation of six District Child Day Care Centers through the current fiscal year.

The committee, by clearing the supplemental appropriation bill, also brought a step closer payment of retroactive salary increases to 17,000 municipal employes for the fiscal year which ended June 30.

Since both houses have approved the necessary money, $4,205,850, the figure will not be changed, and the money will become available when the bill as a whole becomes law.

Decisions of the conference group on the Sesquicentennial and day center money still are subject to clearance by both houses. The House earlier struck out of the money bill the three million dollars for the Sesquicentennial and granted only $50,000 of the $100,000 sought for the centers. The Senate restored the full funds requested by officials for both projects.

Members of the conference group said there was no further question about the day center money, but that there is still some thought of trying to force a separate roll call in the House on the Sesquicentennial fund.

Barron "Thrilled"

Representative Taber (R., N. Y.), ranking minority member of the House Appropriations Committee, said he had opposed the money and that the possibility of a House roll call on it still was being considered. The House on three previous occasions refused to grant funds for the celebration.

Even with the House hurdle ahead, local Sesquicentennial officials warmly applauded the conference decision. Carter Barron, executive vice chairman of the Sesquicentennial Commission set up by congressional act, said he was very thrilled at the decision.

Final approval of the money, he said, would let the commission go ahead with essential activities that have been held up for lack of funds. He pointed out that general planning had been done, but blueprints and detailed plans and specifications have had to await the appropriation.

He said it still is the plan to start the celebration next April 15, but the "Freedom Fair" phase of the program may be delayed somewhat past that date, depending on the speed with which detailed spec-

Text of Vinson's Proposal To Amend Unification Act

Here is the text of a seven-point proposal put forward by Chairman Carl Vinson (D., Ga.) of the House Armed Services Committee yesterday after hearing Navy complaints against Department of Defense plans and policies:

1. Amend Unification Act to provide:
   (a) Secretary of Defense must obtain congressional approval for any administrative cutbacks in appropriated funds.
   (b) That final estimates of any one military department must be submitted to the Congress along with what is granted by the Secretary of Defense and the budget.
2. Build a fire under the special weapons evaluation board in re the B-36.
3. Call upon the President to have a study given by the National Security Council to what our national objectives should be in any future war.
4. Have a board appointed (as General Arnold suggested) to evaluate strategic air warfare.
5. Take action in regard to the 1950 budget to insure that the Navy funds are not withheld without congressional concurrence.
6. Require joint training between Air Force and Navy air.
7. Request reconsideration of supercarrier question (or pass a law requiring its construction).

Dispute Over Air Force's Size Blocks Military Money Bill

By The Associated Press

A head-on dispute in Congress over the size of America's air force stalled a huge military money bill dead in its tracks yesterday.

A Senate-House conference broke up in stubborn disagreement. House members insisted on a 58-group air force. The Senators stood pat for the 48 groups which President Truman and his military chiefs had recommended.

Coupled with this difference was a secondary dispute over a 275-million-dollar program voted by the House for stockpiling strategic and critical wartime materials.

Senator Elmer Thomas (D., Okla.), leader of the Senate conferees, said the Senate could not agree to these programs, which would run the military costs above the total asked by Mr. Truman.

The House conferees were expected to report to the House—which acts first—that the conference has failed.

The bill, calling for expenditure of more than 15 billion dollars, was supposed to have been approved by July 1.

The House proposal to boost Air Force spending and contract authority would cost about 800 million dollars above the total asked by the President.

The House voted this increase in a move to build the Air Force toward a 70-group level which some lawmakers feel is needed for a strong defense.

"We offered compromise figures," Thomas said, "but the House members wouldn't accept them. They said there were too many veterans in the House who would not approve the compromise."

The President's military budget called for $15,325,506,700 to be spent by June 30, 1950. The House boosted this total to $15,909,116,800, with the Air Force getting the increases and the other services taking a cut. The Senate stuck closer to the budget and voted to cut out the House increase for the Air Force.

The budget called for $4,033,887,000 in cash for the Air Force plus $1,432,000,000 in contract authority. The House voted $4,222,954,000 in cash and $1,992,775,000 contract authority. The Senate approved $4,000,887,000 and $1,425,000,000.

The conference had no trouble reaching agreement on Army and Navy spending, Thomas said, with amounts set somewhere between the Senate and House amounts. These, he added, were "completely satisfactory" to Army and Navy chiefs.

The exact amounts were not announced, but these were the amounts originally voted: Army—House $4,481,834,000, Senate $4,570,907,089. Navy—House $4,375,327,600, plus $643,546,000 contract authority; Senate $4,388,079,000 plus the same contract authority.

Atom Probers, Top Air Chiefs Talk in Secret

In a supersecret two-hour session, the Joint Congressional Atomic Energy Committee talked over "matters of common interest" yesterday with the Air Force high command and the Atomic Energy Commission.

Senator McMahon (D., Conn.), chairman of the congressional group, declined to reveal the nature of the problems discussed.

Air Force officials present were Secretary Symington, General Vandenberg, Air Force commander, and General LeMay, head of the Air Force Strategic Command who flew from his Omaha, Nebr., headquarters to attend the session.

Accordingly, speculation was current that the matter of Air Force use of the atom bomb was under consideration.

After the meeting a reporter asked McMahon, "Are you satisfied that when, as and if the Air Force has to deliver the bomb (against an enemy), it can get the bomb instantly?"

McMahon replied emphatically, "Yes, sir."

But this in itself was no indication that the matter of Air Force access to atom bombs was the subject under discussion at the meeting.

Yesterday's session concludes the congressional committee's inquiry for the present into the AEC and of the charges leveled last summer by Senator Hickenlooper (R., Iowa) of "incredible mismanagement" by the AEC.

McMahon said he would convene the committee Monday for an attempt to agree on a final report.

Senator Douglas Seeks 5% Cut In 'Typist Cuties'

Chicago, Oct. 7 (AP).—Senator Douglas (D., Ill.) recommends the economy ax for Washington's "marcelled secretaries and typist cuties" who spare their Government typewriters to save their long fingernails.

He said he thought all the agencies could reduce their personnel by 5 percent without hurting efficiency. This 5 percent, he added, was made up of inefficient workers whose absence wouldn't be noticed.

Radford Statement Sparks Move for Curb Over Money Powers of Johnson

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Adm. Arthur W. Radford yesterday challenged a central point of current Pentagon war planning—the atomic blitzing of enemy cities—and urged that the Nation itself decide whether we should fight a war this way.

During a day-long, sensation-packed congressional hearing, the Pacific Fleet commander attacked the Air Force's B-36 bomber as a "billion-dollar blunder," charged Defense chiefs with ignoring Navy views, and declared USAF chiefs are trying to eliminate naval aviation.

Congressmen were sufficiently impressed with his case—and word reaching them of impending Navy cuts ordered by Defense Secretary Louis Johnson—that a move was started to do something about the situation.

Vinson Offers Program

Chairman Carl Vinson (D., Ga.) of the House Armed Services Committee advanced a seven-point program for the group's consideration, which among other things would:

(1) Call for a restudy of strategic bombing plans and our major objectives in fighting a war.

(2) Curb Johnson's powers over military purse strings.

(3) Require that Johnson reconsider his cancellation of the Navy's super aircraft carrier.

Radford took direct issue with those Air Force and Army planners who hold that our best security bet is "threat of atomic annihilation" and waging such a war if we have to fight.

Would Spare Cities

The 53-year-old naval airman said he would limit use of A-bombs to strictly military, "precision" targets and not employ it against enemy cities.

"In planning to win a war, if we are forced to fight," he said, "we must look to the peace to follow. We must know what kind of peace we wish to have and what price we are willing to pay to achieve it . . .

"A war of annihilation might possibly bring a pyrrhic military victory, but it would be politically and economically senseless. In my opinion, the American people, if they were well informed on all factors involved, would consider such a war morally reprehensible."

Vinson told the committee he had been "reliably informed" that Secretary Johnson had told the Navy it cannot spend 353 million

Truman Bets 50c On Fine Day For Sunday

Charlottesville, Va., Oct. 7 (U.P.).—Despite gathering clouds, President Truman today promised good weather for a Sunday-morning hike through the colorful, wooded hills. He said he already had bet his host, Stanley Woodward, 50 cents on it.

From his bulging brief case, the President brought out two Weather Bureau maps, pointed out the high and low pressure areas, and predicted it would be bright and sunny in the Charlottesville area Sunday morning.

"It's not who makes the maps, but how you read them," he said, adding that it has been a hobby of his for 30 or 40 years.

New Jersey Killer Of 13 'Insane'; To Escape Trial

Camden, N. J., Oct. 7 (AP).—Mass killer Howard B. Unruh is insane, Prosecutor Mitchell H. Cohen announced today.

He will not be brought to trial on any of the 13 indictments charging him with murder.

Newly elected directors on Capital Transit board

By S. Oliver Goodman
Post Reporter

The Wolfson group, owner of controlling stock interest in the Capital Transit Co., yesterday stepped into an active role in management of the company.

The transit board elected four new directors to represent the Florida businessmen's interest and also selected one of them as chairman of the executive committee and to fill a newly created vice presidency.

The new directors are: Daniel W. Bell, president of the American Security & Trust Co. of Washington; Louis E. Wolfson and J. A. B. Broadwater, both of Jacksonville, Fla., and John J. Manning of New York City.

Wolfson and Broadwater are members of the Florida group that recently bought a block of 109,458 shares of Capital Transit stock from North American Co. for $2,189,160. Manning is attorney for the group.

Bell is head of the bank that lent $1,250,000 to the Wolfson syndicate. The loan, at 3 percent, is secured by the Capital Transit stock and is payable within the next 12 months.

Broadwater, who was elected to the two executive positions, said he expects soon to become a resident of Washington and take an active part in Capital Transit affairs.

A veteran in business and finance, he is president of the Universal Investment Co. of Jacksonville, a director of the Broadway National Bank of Tampa, and a

Three From District Killed In Head-On Crash in Virginia

Three Washington residents were killed yesterday, apparently instantly, when the large sedan in which they were riding collided head-on with a truck on U. S. Route 1, about 5 miles south of South Hill, Va.

They were tentatively identified as:

J. Walter Stewart, about 72, of 509 T st. nw., for many years a bail bondsman here.

Mrs. Cassandra Stewart, about 60, his wife.

Miss W. Gertrude Brown, manager of Midway Hall, a Government dormitory for Negro girls at 24th st. and Oklahoma ave. ne.

Virginia authorities said the Cadillac sedan was traveling south when it apparently went out of control and swerved into the northbound lane, colliding with the truck.

The truck was owned by the Associated Transfer Co., authorities said, and was being driven by George Melton, about 35, of Baltimore. They said he was treated for shock.

Bodies of the three victims were taken to the Giles Funeral Home at South Hill, about 30 miles south of Petersburg.

Stewart was widely known here. Harold F. Hawken, his attorney, said Stewart told him he was born near Charlotte, N. C., and reared by his grandmother, who had been dollars of the 3.5-billion-dollar 1950 budget still before Congress.

Admiral Challenges Atom Blitz Strategy

Of this, 203 millions will come out of naval aviation, Representative George Bates (R., Mass.) stated. This will mean that the Navy would receive deliveries of only 48 planes a month—compared with 300 just before Pearl Harbor, he added.

Radford estimated that such a drying up of new aircraft—forcing the depletion of reserves—would mean the Navy could operate only one or two carriers by 1952.

"From those figures," commented Bates, "it would appear they are scuttling naval aviation."

Vinson said the committee would interrupt the presentation of the "Navy case" to hear naval budget officials this morning on the cuts.

He suggested amending the Unification Act to prevent Johnson from slashing appropriations for any service without obtaining congressional approval.

Other Points in Memo

Other points in the memorandum he wrote while listening to Radford would call for reconsideration of the abandonment of the Navy's super aircraft carrier, and joint training and wider exchange of personnel between the Air Force and naval aviation.

Vinson also suggested "building a fire" under the Pentagon Weapons System Evaluation Group to expedite an evaluation of the B-36. The group of experts and scientists already has undertaken such a study, and Radford said yesterday that was the proper forum for such an evaluation—not the committee.

Chairman Vinson's memo obviously was intended to cover the main points raised by Radford. He proposed that the National Security Council consider our "national objectives" in a future war—evidently a study of the Navy man's point about "losing the peace" through mass bombing of civilians. He also suggested appointment of a board to evaluate strategic air warfare, and for the committee to take action to prevent Johnson from cutting back 1950 funds without congressional concurrence.

Explained by McNarney

Following Vinson's action, the Defense Department issued an explanation of the pending cutbacks. Speaking at Petersburg, Va., Gen. Joseph T. McNarney, Johnson's economy chief, said the armed forces have been ordered to cut their current spending about 10 percent. "Some leniency" was allowed as to the Air Force, the United Press quoted McNarney as saying.

Reason for the slash, said McNarney, was to pare the rate of spending and size of the armed forces now so that it would be easier for them to live within the even smaller budget proposed for next year. Vinson disclosed Thursday that the 1951 budget provides large reductions in the number of aircraft carriers and other warships in operation.

McNarney was quoted as saying that a sizable portion of the Air Force cut—61 million dollars—would be accomplished by eliminating funds for USAF flying hours. The Air Force, he said, had scheduled 211,000 more hours than can be flown.

Committeemen quizzed Radford about the reports that Navy morale had been shattered by Pentagon actions and Navy Secretary Francis Matthews' assertion that low morale was confined to protesting naval aviators.

In All Service, He Says

The Admiral took issue with the Secretary, declaring that the feeling went throughout the service. He said it stemmed partly from a feeling that the Navy was being destroyed as a fighting force by repeated reductions and that the Navy's viewpoint did not receive full consideration.

Representative Porter Hardy (D., Va.) wanted to know if Navy men have confidence in the top command—the offices of Secretary Matthews and Secretary Johnson.

"Put your cards on the table," advised Chairman Vinson, as Radford paused.

Carefully choosing his words, the veteran carrier airman replied:

"I feel the general impression in the Navy is that decisions are being made in the highest offices of the Defense Department without adequate information that can come only from the Navy."

Navy Not Asked for Views

"The Navy is not asked for its views," Hardy persisted.

"Or if asked to express them the opinions are not given enough weight," answered Radford.

Plugging in again, Hardy demanded if "there is a feeling of a lack of confidence, or that a wall separates you from the Secretary of Defense."

"I think so," Radford said.

The Pacific Fleet commander read a lengthy, prepared statement giving his views on the Navy's present complaints to a packed committee room yesterday. It was the same statement he had given in executive session to the group Thursday, after Secretary Matthews proposed that it should not be made public. The committee overruled Matthews after hearing it.

Radford declared that, in general, his views though not representing the official Navy atitude due to Matthews' objections—did conform to those of virtually all ranking naval officers, active and retired. He said he had discussed the basic issues and concepts of national security with most of them and could make this statement.

Vinson demanded that he name them.

"Fleet Admirals Halsey, Nimitz, King and Leahy," Radford replied, "and Admirals Blandy, Conolly and Denfeld—"

"That's enough," broke in Vinson.

Radford began by stating that he backed the 1948 Key West agreement assigning strategic air warfare as a primary mission of the Air Force and that he strongly favored unification of the service.

Must Be Mutual

But, he added, "real unification must depend, in the ultimate, on leadership, mutual trust, understanding and respect."

Then, Radford stressed the point he was to come back to again and again—we must fit our war plans to the type of peace we want after the war.

"I don't believe in mass killings of noncombatants," he said at one point. And calling attention to the troubles resulting from the devastation of Europe and Japan and the fact that Russia now has the A-bomb, Radford noted:

"We've got to be smarter than we were last time if we hope to have a livable world after another."

The veteran airman then launched into an attack on the Air Force's pride—the giant B-36 bomber. He explained he did so because it has been the symbol of the "cheap and easy victory" by mass destruction of populations.

Assertions Not Valid

Directly challenging Air Force claims—that the B136 can perform long-range missions by day or night without fighter escort, that it is difficult to intercept over 40,000 feet, and that it can carry out precise and effective bombing from such altitudes, Radford said:

"These assertions are not valid. The unescorted B-36 is unacceptably vulnerable. The B-36 cannot hit precision targets from very high altitudes under battle conditions."

Radford criticized the Air Force for concentrating on "slow, expensive, very vulnerable, single-purpose heavy atomic bombers at the expense of small fast bombers and extremely high performance fighters." The latter represent "real air power," he said.

Referring to the word that Russia has the A-bomb, he declared: "Adequate interceptor fighters must provide the essential defense of our own bases and the essential defense of our own homeland."

Lack of them serves to "invite the desperate attack," the admiral declared.

Radford told the committee he approved of the 1943 order to build 100 of the B-36s and the postwar decision to complete them for evaluation of the craft. But he sharply attacked the Air Force for placing large additional orders for them before they were fully evaluated and without consulting the Army and Navy.

This action "undermined unification," he said, by committing the Nation to a national strategy "which is seriously open to question."

Radford also hit Secretary Johnson's decision to cancel the super carrier on a 2 to 1 vote of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. He denied the Navy was seeking to "usurp" the Air Force's strategic bombing role in projecting the vessed and that carriers are easily sunk.

Without Adequate Knowledge

The decision was made, he said, without an adequate knowledge or appreciation of its place in the defense team. And it presents a dangerous precedent of permitting two services—without such knowledge—to stop the development of the weapons of a third. The sound thing, he said, is to let one service develop prototypes of new weapons but require all to pass on putting them into costly production.

Shouldn't the size of navies be related to that of potential enemy fleets, asked Vinson.

Radford said that used to be true.

"Navies today are designed not to meet enemy navies, but to project air power into vital areas of the world where no other power can reach," he declared.

The Admiral criticized the Air Force for withholding from them data regarding the B-36. Plane information has been exchanged between the two services for 30 years, he said. He also said they refused to assign naval aviators to the B-36s and Strategic Air Command in the annual exchange of officers between the two services.

Calls It 1941 Airplane

Referring to the B-36 as a "1941 airplane," Radford declared the Air Force had a better bomber available—Boeing's 600-mile-an-hour jet.

Representative Paul Kilday (D., Tex.) pointed out that the B-47 had a much shorter range than the B-36.

"That's the meat of the coconut," answered Radford. "Who says a bomber must go 10,000 miles? You first have to get a satisfactory airplane even if it'll only go 200 miles."

With Bases in Poland

Kilday recalled that an Air Force officer had said the B-47 would be a good substitute for the B-36 "if someone'll give us bases in Poland."

"How can we reach the heart of a huge country like Russia without long-range bombers?" demanded Representative Overton Brooks (D., La.).

Redford said you might not be able to at once, and would have to get bases closer in. Long-range bombers of the B-36 type wont do the job, he said, because the enemy will shoot them down.

"Can you get carriers close enough to Russia to bomb them—that's the heart of the question," asked Brooks.

"I say so unequivocally," the Admiral replied. "I'll be glad to take them there if we have to."

Seven Conclusions on B-36 Drawn by Admiral Radford

Here are the seven conclusions with which Admiral A. W. Radford wound up his statement to the House Armed Service Committee yesterday.

1. The B-36, under any theory of war is a bad gamble with national security. Should an enemy force an atomic war upon us, the B-36 would be useless defensively and inadequate offensively. The plane itself is not so important as the acceptance or rejection of the theory of atom blitz warfare which it symbolizes. It is fortunate that honest doubts as to the adequacy of the B-36 have served to bring this more vital issue before the country.

2. I do not believe that the threat of atomic blitz will be an effective deterrent to a war, or that it will win a war. I do not believe that the atomic blitz theory is generally accepted by military men. However, if after careful study of all sides of the question the retaliatory atom blitz were to become the determined and studied policy of the United States, then we must have a much more efficient weapon than the B-36 to deliver the blitz. We are today capable of procuring more effective and more efficient planes for the task than the B-36.

3. Development in the Air Force of planes suitable for tactical and fighter missions has suffered by over-emphasis on the heavy bomber. This is apparent by inspecting the proportions for each category—not in terms of numbers of groups and planes—but in terms of money, men and materials. Less than 6 percent of Air Force research and development funds is earmarked for tactical and fighter types. The lack of adequate fighters may have grave consequences for future security of our bases and our homeland. It is not only wasteful, but may be disastrous to spend our scarce budget dollars on large expensive planes dedicated to an unsound theory of war.

4. The unusual procedures used to push the B-36 program to its present status were not justified. They undermine all unification; they prevent progress toward mutual trust, understanding and unified planning; they short-cut the vital and proved procedures developed through experience for safeguarding the security of our country.

5. Any service must be permitted to bring an experimental weapon through the development, test and evaluation stages. On the other hand, any service must be prevented from procuring any weapon in quantity until it has passed these stages.

6. We should develop weapons capable of maximum effectiveness from all land and sea areas which we can control. We should push research and development of weapons to this end. We should not, however, base our war plans on such weapons, nor should we procure them in quantity, until they are proven. Our defense budget should not be used for unproven weapons. Nor can they afford expensive military procurement on a "stop and go" basis involving costly cancellations for which our country receives nothing.

7. Strategic bombing should be a primary role of the Air Force. However, the United States is not sound in relying on the socalled "strategic bombing concept" to its present extent. This concept is symbolized by the B-36 delivering the atom blitz In the minds of our citizens this fallacious concept promises a short-cut to victory. Our citizens must realize that its military leaders cannot make this promise—that here is no short-cut, no cheap, no easy way to win a war. We must realize that the best way to win a future war is to prevent it. We must realize that the threat of instant atomic retaliation will not prevent it, and may even invite it. We must realize that we cannot gamble that the atom blitz of annihilation will even win a war. We must realize if war is forced upon us, we must win it, and win it in such a way that it can be followed by a stable, livable peace.

U. S. 'Front' Is in Europe, Bradley Says

By Robert S. Allen

The most significant occurrence at the first meeting of the military chiefs of the North Atlantic pact was an unreported statement by Gen. Omar Bradley.

The head of the Joint Chiefs of Staff declared that the defensive boundaries of the United States are in Europe.

"Our friends in western Europe live within the boundaries of our own defensive frontier," he said. "Their geographical locations occupy the lands we helped to liberate and which we must not abandon to new aggression."

The great significance of this statement rests in the fact that Bradley has asked Defense Secretary Louis Johnson to change the announced policy that European military aid will not include U. S. troops.

Johnson stated that position in an appearance before the House Foreign Affairs Committee. He said, "Under this program, no United States troops will be sent abroad to employ the equipment we will provide. This military assistance program is solely an equipment and technical training program. The only United States personnel involved will be a strictly limited number of training and technical specialists to assist and advise the participating countries."

Bradley now wants this personnel to be expanded to include operational and combat units. These forces would be in addition to the occupation troops in Germany.

Marzani Parole Request Put in Hands of Board

The paroling of Carl A. Marzani, former State Department worker convicted of making false statements concerning Communist Party activities to the Government, is a matter for the Federal Board of Parole, the District Commissioners decided yesterday.

Marzani applied for a parole to the District Board of Parole while serving a one to three-year sentence in the District Jail. On July 20, before the board acted on his request, he was transferred to the United States Correctional Institution at Danbury, Conn.

According to Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West, the city board thus lost jurisdiction over Marzani's parole and it is now up to the Federal group.

Auriol Expected to Assign Cabinet-Forming Task Today

Paris, Oct. 7 (NYHT).—The stalemate among French political parties was unbroken today as President Vincent Auriol continued his consulations with party leaders but failed to designate a new premier.

The best guess was the President would ask someone Saturday afternoon to make an attempt to form a new cabinet. But it looked today as though the crisis would be a long and difficult one.

The cabinet crisis is the reflection of deep division between those who argue that any appreciable increase in wages would be inflationary and those who insist that a depressed level of wages demands immediate attention.

Political leaders are speculating the President may turn immediately to a member of the Popular Republican movement. A coalition of the M. R. P. with one or more of the other parties appears the most likely solution to the crisis, if one is found.

Russia Denounced In U. N. by Tito Men

Lake Success, Oct. 7 (NYHT).—Yugoslavia denounced Russia in the United Nations today for double-crossing her on two joint business ventures and described the Moscow government as a ruthless and selfish partner.

Further embarrassing the Soviet Union, Dr. Joza Vilfan, Yugoslav delegate, quoted from a hitherto secret Russian document which exposed Russia as a harsh master who helps smaller nations only if they are "friends."

The attack on Russia came in the economic committee of the General Assembly during a discussion on economic aid to underdeveloped countries.

Such assistance, Dr. Vilfan said, should be made "only through the United Nations and without any political discrimination," although it might be on a restricted scale. He justified this by pointing out how his country had been exploited by private capital before the war and victimized by the Soviet Union after it.

Other U. N. developments:

1. Carlos P. Romulo, Assembly president, saw Bulgarian and Yugoslav representatives about the Greek-Balkans situation. One delegate in touch with the conversations said absolutely no progress was made.

2. American and British sources had little to say when asked about a plan for the U. N. to ban use of the atomic bomb except against an aggressor nation.

3. The political committee continued hearing representatives of native population groups in Italy's former colonies.

4. Seven countries backed a United States move in the special political committee to get a ruling from the International Court of Justice whether Bulgaria, Hungary and Romania violated their peace treaties on questions of human rights.

Red Leaders In East Germany

third of the voters cast "no" ballots in that election. The new regime actually advances only a step the split that became evident three years ago in the occupation policies of Russia and the three Western powers, the United States, Britain and France.

Neither of the German governments concedes by its name that it represents only east Germany or west Germany.

The new Soviet regime is "the German Democratic Republic." The government of the three western zones, covering 46 million Germans is the "German Federal Republic."

The People's Council set itself up as a parliamentary lower house with lawmaking power. After approval by the Soviet military administration, expected next Tuesday, the presidents of the five states in the Soviet zone will appoint an upper house.

Together these bodies will elect a president, who will, in turn, choose the ministers. Wilhelm Pieck, a Communist elder statesman, probably will get the presidency.

The Communists whipped together a government in a matter of hours, whereas the Bonn Republic required months of effort, plus a parliamentary election.

The manifesto called for abolition of the Bonn Republic and the statute by which the Ruhr industries are supervised, alignment of Germany's politics and trade with the East, a peace treaty and withdrawal of occupation troops.

The chamber sent a cable to New York asking that the Big Four Foreign Ministers take up the German question again.

American and British officials in Frankfurt said Moscow's heavy-handed German policy troubled even west German Communists. Seven high Communist Party officials have quit their posts in the past week.

No. 1 Nation In Production, Soviets Boast

Moscow, Oct. 7 (U.P.).—The youth newspaper, Komsomolskaya Pravda, reported today that Russia's first postwar five-year plan is being more than fulfilled ahead of schedule, making the Soviet Union "the world's leading industrial and agricultural power."

The newspaper reported gross production in mid-1949 was 41 percent over 1940.

The report cited five-year target figures now being achieved: 250 million tons of coal; 35,400,000 tons of oil; 82 billion kilowatt hours of electricity; 19,500,000 tons of cast iron and 500,000 automobiles.

Komsomolskaya Pravda claimed for Russia second place in total railroad mileage with 4375 miles added since the war.

It said Russia now is totally self-sufficient in cotton. In the past, Russia got half her cotton from the United States.

friends, neighbors or business associates in the police campaign.

One report was that the raids started after a weekend gun fight between police and a group of plotters who attempted to seize the International Postal Exchange in the Zizkov district of Prague.

There is long-distance telephone and radio transmitting equipment in the building, and it was reported the plotters had allies outside the capital whom they wanted to contact for a joint uprising. Two policemen were said to have been killed.

An official report told of a sabotage fire Monday night in a big garage, for which several persons were arrested. A night watchman was slain.

Most of those seized were held incommunicado. Police headquarters said that if they were political suspects they would be held at least a week at the big Pankrac Prison before any information could be given about them.

This was the reply given to persons who inquired for an Associated Press worker, a young woman teletypist, who disappeared from her home last night. Police have searched and sealed her room.

2d Brother, Ex-U. S. Official, Missing Behind Iron Curtain

NYHT News Service

Noel Haviland Field, former State Department official and brother of Hermann H. Field, the architect who mysteriously disappeared at Warsaw Airport August 22, also has vanished behind the Iron Curtain, the State Department disclosed yesterday.

It is feared both have fallen into the hands of the Russian secret police. Noel Field, who had been labeled an underground Communist by Whitaker Chambers in the Alger Hiss perjury trial, was denounced at the recent Budapest trials as the "American intelligence agent" who persuaded former Hungarian Foreign Minister Laszlo Rajk to serve as an "imperialist spy."

The State Department said nothing had been heard of Noel Field since last June when he was living in Prague. An acquaintance visiting his hotel was told Field was not home. Several days later the same acquaintance received a telegram from Field saying he was going to Hungary for a few days.

"We have no information he's been heard from since," ssaid Lincoln White, State Department spokesman.

The State Department had sent six urgent inquiries to the Polish Foreign Office about Hermann Field. To each inquiry Warsaw has replied: "We are investigating and you will be informed when the investigation is completed."

American officials suspect Noel Field was seized by Soviet agents who wanted to extract from him "confessions" he was involved in a treason plot against Hungary. They think Hermann may have been nabbed as a hostage to induce a "confession" from Noel.

3 Soldiers Quit Red Area

Vienna, Oct. 7 (AP).—Three American soldiers who have spent the last five months in the Soviet zone of Austria—"of their own free wills," the Russians say—today hiked back into the United States zone under guard, clean-shaven and in full uniforms.

The GIs were Pvt. Peter Pontillo, 34, of Cleveland, Recruit Carl Ruhnke, 30, of Miami, Ariz., and Recruit Carl Pruester, 30, of Newark, N. J.

A United States Army spokesman, reporting the Army is examining AWOL charges in the case, said Pontillo was suffering from malaria and insect bites, apparently by bedbugs, and Pruester, who had lost 10 pounds, had scabies.

United States Army authorities questioned the three at length.

Col. Byroade, Bruce Named To High Posts

Two key posts in the conduct of American foreign relations were filled yesterday by the appointments of:

James Bruce of Maryland, former Ambassador to Argentina, as director of the new $1,314,000,000 program of military aid to foreign countries; and

Henry A. Byroade of Indiana, 36-year-old Army colonel, wartime commander of the Services of Supply in India and eastern China, as director of the State Department's Office of German and Austrian affairs.

The President sent Bruce's nomination to the Senate only a day after signing the military aid bill, designed to help eight European and six Asiatic nations defend themselves against possible Soviet attack.

Bruce promptly accepted the job and promised, in a formal statement, "to conduct it as efficiently as possible and at the very least possible cost to the United States taxpayers."

In his new job Bruce is expected to report to the Secretary of State, but with the help of a small staff of technicians in the Pentagon. In addition, technical missions will be stationed in each of the countries getting arms under the program.

Altogether between 300 and 500 employes probably will be needed to administer the act.

The Byroade appointment at the State Department marks virtually a clean sweep of the civilian and military officials who formerly directed American policy in Germany.

Gen. Lucius D. Clay has been replaced in Germany by John J. McCloy; former Undersecretary William H. Draper, who dealt with Germany from the Pentagon, has gone back to private life; and Robert D. Murphy, the State Department's chief expert on Germany since the end of the war, has just been named Ambassador to Belgium. In addition, Jacob Beam, the career official who handled affairs of the German "desk" at the State Department, has been assigned to Indonesia.

Colonel Byrode went to China with Gen. George C. Marshall in 1945 after brilliant wartime services in organizing the supply route over the "Hump" of the Himalayas. Later he was assigned to Washington as chief of the international affairs group of the General staff's plans and operations division, where he dealt with plans for Germany and Austria.

U. S. Envoys in West Europe Plan Early Talks in Paris

Paris, Oct. 7 (AP).—United States envoys to leading western European countries will gather in Paris late this month, shortly before the London conference of United States diplomats from "iron curtain" countries.

A high American Embassy official released the news today. He said the Paris meeting, to be held October 21 or October 22, should not be considered a "counterpart" of the October 24 get-together in London. But he did not specify what the difference might be.

Both conferences will get the benefit of first-hand reports from Washington's Ambassador to Russia, Alan G. Kirk, and Assistant Secretary of State George Perkins.

The embassy official warned against over-emphasizing the importance of the Paris session, which he described as merely the first in a series of regional meetings.

It is expected to survey American policy toward Russia, with the emphasis on events in Germany, and the United States foreign arms aid program signed by President Truman yesterday.

Besides Kirk and the Ambassador to France, David K. Bruce, others expected in Paris are Lewis Douglas, Ambassador to Britain; James C. Dunn, Ambassador to Italy, and John J. McCloy, high commissioner to Germany.

GI Schooling Cost May Hit $60 Billion

By Robert Thompson
Post Reporter

The GI bill of rights educational provisions may rack up a cost of 60 billion dollars to American taxpayers between now and 1956, of which less than nine billion dollars has already been spent, VA Administrator Carl R. Gray, jr., announced yesterday.

His announcement came after two major developments in regulation of courses which veterans may take under the GI bill. These were:

1. The VA announced instruction 1-B, effective November 1. This bars "a vocational and recreational courses" but liberalizes provisions under which veterans may change courses or resume study. These were sharply restricted under the Administration's previous instruction 1-A.

2. Approval by the Senate Labor Committee of the Taft bill which, while continuing congressional bars on avocational and recreational courses, limits VA authority to dictate to veterans what courses they shall or shall not take.

Gray's figures on the potential prospective total 60-billion-dollar cost of the GI bill education provisions were based on 15 million veterans with an average of 40 months eligibility each. This makes a total of 600 million months at an average cost of $100 a month, or 60 billion dollars.

Some executives of educational organizations here questioned the figures last night. They pointed out that under present law, exactly half the course of the GI bill has been run, with less than nine billion dollars spent. It runs out in 1956. A VA official said that while cost of GI students in institutions of higher learning is now on the decline, cost in vocational training institutions is rising sharply.

Instruction 1-B, replacing the controversial 1-A, no longer requires "justification" from individual veterans on new courses, so long as they are in the "general field" of his education or occupational objective. Previously, he had to "justify" any important deviation from a straight course.

Senator Taft introduced his bill to restrict VA authority over GI courses after the Instruction 1-A raised a furore of controversy. It directs generally that the VA may not limit or prescribe GI courses except under certain circumstances, but continues bars on the so-called "recreational and avocational" courses.

U. S. Blasts Chinese Reds' News Muzzle

By The Associated Press

The State Department blasted the Chinese Communists yesterday for "flagrant disregard" of generally accepted international standards in dealing with foreigners.

A strongly-worded formal statement said a new order muzzling American and other Western correspondents at Shanghai is the latest in a series of acts which raise "wholly justifiable doubts regarding the responsible nature" of the new Communist regime.

Under the new orders only correspondents from countries that have recognized the Red government set up at Peiping can send telegrams or radiograms.

Only Russia and some of the Soviet bloc countries have given such recognition.

The State Department also reported yesterday that Chinese Nationalists have released two American ships detained near Shanghai last week.

A message from United States Consul General Walter P. McConaughy at Shanghai relayed reports from the ships' skippers that they were released before noon.

What's the TRUTH about Washington's Lobbies?

Now at last Congress is getting curious about the multi-million dollar business of influencing national legislation. How many of the thousands of lobbyists have registered under the 1946 law? Color TV Cameras Put on Dog in Test

By the United Press

The Columbia Broadcasting System yesterday trained its television cameras on a promising cat-and-dog fight to demonstrate its "sequential" color system. But the fight didn't come off and the technicians got nothing but a bored "meow" for their pains.

The show was staged for the benefit of the Federal Communications Commission, which is holding hearings to determine whether color TV is ready for the public. If the answer is "yes," one of the systems now under development will be licensed.

Yesterday's demonstration was the second given by C. B. S. and was staged to test the "sequential" system on outdoor spectacles. The color cameras were sent to the Woodrow Wilson High School football field for the benefit of the commission and some 150 engineers, technicians and newsmen.

Grid Game Telecast

The cameras were turned first on a brown and white collie and a smoky colored cat on the sidelines. But the two would-be antagonists suddenly lost interest in whatever differences they might have had and lay down for a little rest.

The cat licked its paw and "meowed" at the cameras.

The coverage of the football game between the Roosevelt and Western high school teams was more successful.

The Roosevelt players wore orange jerseys while those from Western were in cherry-red. Spectators said the color differences were not sharply defined from a distance, but that close up they were easily distinguishable.

The demonstration was staged under an overcast sky that occasionally sprinkled the players with light rain. But it was possible to follow the flight of the football on passes and kicks without noticeable eyestrain.

RCA to Get Chance

The show closed the C.B.S. demonstration of its "sequential" color system, so-called because it transmits red, blue and green one at a time, but at a very high rate of speed. It went through 18 separate indoor tests Thursday.

Radio Corp. of America gets its chance to demonstrate its "simultaneous" color system next Monday. Sometime in November, the commission will view all present color TV systems in a comparative test with black-and-white reception.

Interior Will Get $584,098,000 In Compromise Bill

Congress yesterday completed action on a $584,098,000 Interior Department appropriation bill and sent it to President Truman.

The Senate followed the House in accepting a compromise measure worked out by a conference committee.

Originally, the House had voted only $536,461,000 for the department for the current fiscal year, which began July 1. The Senate upped this figure to $595,262,000.

The final version contained $354,014,510 for reclamation projects, the biggest item for any one bureau.

$40,000 Payroll Robbery

New York, Oct. 7 (AP).—Three men carrying $30,000 in payroll funds for workers on the United Nations headquarters construction job were robbed shortly after noon today by the driver of a taxicab they had hailed.

Critic Joins AMA Fight on Medical Insurance Plan

Detroit, Oct. 7 (U.P.).—Dr. Paul de Kruif, widely-known science writer and longtime critic of the medical profession, offered today to aid the Nation's doctors in a fight against socialized medicine.

"My confidence in the ability of organized medicine to care for the health of the American people has been greatly strengthened in recent months," De Kruif said in explaining his change in attitude toward the American Medical Association.

Since he criticized medical practices in his first book, "Our Medicine Men," in 1922, De Kruif's writings have been scored by Dr. Morris Fishbein, editor of the association's Journal, as inaccurate and prejudiced.

"Socialized medicine would be the entering wedge to socialism on a broad scale," De Kruif said.

Store Sales Here Drop for Second Week

By S. Oliver Goodman

A downward trend in Washington department store sales is becoming more noticeable.

In the week ended October 1, dollar volume of local stores slumped 17 per cent below the same 1948 period, according to the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond.

This was the second consecutive week in which sales dropped, an unusual happening in Washington. In the week ended September 24, sales here were reported 6 per cent down.

The decline in the past two weeks apparently erased all of the gains recorded earlier in September and the month's sales now are estimated 5 per cent lower than in the corresponding period last year.

Merchants will be specially interested in October results to see whether the downward trend will be prolonged or is merely temporary. For the first eight months, Washington store sales were a bright spot in the Nation with a 3 per cent increase. Nationally, sales were reported about 5 per cent lower.

The lower trend for the weeks ended October 1 and September 24 was Nation-wide. The Federal Reserve Board yesterday reported these percentage changes by districts from the like 1948 period:

This was more than double the assets figure at the end of 1940, according to President Clarence E. Kefauver. Amount of outstanding mortgage loans stood at $13,552,264 at the end of September, a gain of nearly eight million since 1940. Columbia Federal moved into handsome new quarters at 730 11th st. nw. in May, 1948.

NEW IDEA: A "window shopper" device brings in added sales to a Detroit men's clothing store, the Wall Street Journal reports. It's a meter gadget which swings into action after the shop is closed in the evening. If a passerby sees some garment in the window that he wants, he puts a quarter in an aluminum box and speaks into microphone, giving his name, address, and the item's number. A tape records the message and the next morning the goods are delivered with the customer's 25-cent meter expenditure credited on his bill.

CREDIT: Collections on Washington department store charge accounts are averaging higher than those in the Fifth Reserve District, the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond notes. Such collections were 48 percent here in August as compared with an average of 43 percent throughout the region. Meanwhile, local stores' inventories on August 31 were reported 3 percent less than on the same date last year, while outstanding orders on the same date were 21 percent down. Bolling C-47 Wreck Found; 9 Killed

Forest rangers and rescue workers found the burned wreckage of a C-47 transport plane from Bolling Air Force Base here, with the bodies of its nine occupants, near the top of Mount Mitchell, N. C., yesterday.

It had crashed into the peak, highest in the Eastern United States, while on the way Wednesday from Bolling base to Mobile, Ala., when the area was blanketed with fog. Mount Mitchell is about 35 miles northeast of Asheville.

The difficult task of bringing out the bodies of seven airmen who lived in the Washington area and two soldiers who died as aerial hitchhikers began yesterday through fog and rain and over "impossible" mountainous terrain. Bolling base officers said the bodies probably will be returned here today.

Those who died were:

Capt. John W. Sensor, 27, of 4206 Wheeler rd. se., the pilot.

First Lieut. Frank J. Clark, 26, of 15 Danbury st. se., the copilot.

Capt. John J. Jett, 31, of 1600 Fort Davis pl. se.

First Lieut. Charles W. Cross, 26, of 1014 Barnaby ter. se.

T/Sergt. Walter E. Cosby, 27, of 331 Anacostia rd. se., crew chief.

S/Sergt. John W. McDonald, 35, of 829 Virginia ave., Hagerstown, Md.

S/Sergt. Reginald E. Silva, 29, of 2927 1st st. se.

Pfc. C. J. Grimes, attached to Fort Belvoir, a hitchhiker.

Pvt. Louis H. Acree, recently transferred to Fort George G. Meade, Md., also a hitchhiker.

The ship apparently crashed about 10:30 a. m., Wednesday. Two men, Frank Bowditch and Max Robinson, who were on the mountain, heard a crash and explosion about that time. They said they first thought it was a mining blast, but reported it to authorities when they heard of the missing plane.

The find yesterday, pinpointed by the report, ended a widespread search by all available Air Force, Army, and civilian rescue agencies. The first persons to arrive at the burned wreckage said that eight of the bodies were inside, where apparently the men died instantly. The ninth, they said, was a short distance from the plane, where he apparently had crept, and then died of burns and injuries.

Families of the men here kept anxious vigil through the long hours until the craft was located and the bodies found. Operations officers at Bolling base, in touch by radio with searchers, made contact with each family here each hour.

Then, the sad duty of final notification was turned over to chaplains. Maj. Albert Karnell and Capt. Norris T. Morton, Protestant chaplains, and Lieut. Edward J. Cleary, Catholic chaplain, visited the families, breaking the news and extending comfort as best they could.

Bolling officers said they believe all the airmen were covered by the maximum of insurance, and that in addition, the families of the airmen and of the two soldiers will received six months' pay for each victim, plus burial expenses. They said a memorial service probably will be held at the base shortly.

The accident was particularly tragic for the families of Captain Jett, Lieutenant Cross, and Sergeant Silva. They were on the flight as passengers to bring back a B-25 ship from Brookley Air Force Base, near Mobile.

Captain Sensor's wife is the former Laurene Broberg. They have two sons, George, 5, and John L., 4 years old.

A pilot training instructor at Bolling for the past year, Captain Sensor had served with the Army Air Forces for seven years, receiving his commission in 1943. He served two years overseas, being stationed in Berlin and Munich. He had more than 3000 flying hours to his credit.

A graduate of the Aurora (Ill.) High School, he attended Loras College in Dubuque, Iowa. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edward F. Sensor, and a brother, Edward L. Sensor, live in Elgin, Ill.

First Lieutenant Clark was married to the former Billy Ford of Dallas, Tex. They have a 6-month-old daughter.

A member of the Air Forces for nine years, he was overseas 15 months during the war with the Thirteenth Air Force in the Pacific. He was a veteran of 64 combat missions and held the Air Medal with three oak leaf clusters and the Philippine Liberation Ribbon. He also had chalked up more than 3000 flying hours and was a pilot training instructor at Bolling Air Base.

His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank G. Clark, a sister Miss Edna Clark, and three brothers, Fred A. Clark, Ray Clark and W. A. Clark, all live in Denison, Tex.

Captain Jett's wife, Olive, and their two sons, Richard, 5, and

Jett

A member of the Air Force for nine years, he was graduated from West Point in 1945. He was stationed overseas in Wiesbaden, Germany, from March, 1946, to last February. Credited with 1500 flying hours, he held the Army Commendation Ribbon and several British medals.

Sergeant Cosby was married to the former Reba Page of Bardwell, Ky. They have a 3-year-old son, Michael, and she expects another child this month.

2 Ploesti Raid Survivors Died In N. C. Crash

Two survivors of the Ploesti oil field raids, reunited two weeks ago after a six-year separation, were victims of the crash of the C-47 transport plane Wednesday, on Mount Mitchell, N. C.

Bolling Air Force base officers disclosed last night that two of the nine men who died in the ship had survived together in the same B-24 the high-cost bombing raid on the Ploesti oil fields in Romania, on August 1, 1943.

The two were T/Sergt. Walter E. Cosby, 27, of 331 Anacostia rd. se. and Sergt. John W. McDonald, 35, of 829 Virginia ave., Hagerstown, Md.

The Ploesti raid started with 177 bombers from the Eighth and Ninth Air Forces. Of these, 54 were lost, and 532 Americans were killed, missing, or prisoners. Even so, they dumped more than 13,000 tons of bombs.

Cosby and McDonald, then engineer gunners, went through unscathed. Shortly afterward, they were separated and hadn't seen each other since. Two weeks ago, McDonald was transferred to Bolling base. In the operations coffee shop, the two met and recognized each other.

The exchange, first in this area, was organized by the New Life Committee of the Presbytery of Washington City under the direction of the Rev. James Curtis Fahl, pastor of Metropolitan Presbyterian Church, and the Rev. Ralph K. Merker, stated clerk.

It is part of presbytery's participation in a Nation-wide United Evangelistic Advance effort being carried on in Protestant churches.

In announcing the exchange, Mr. Fahl declared that "it marks a milestone in Presbyterian Church affairs in this area by demonstrating the parity of the Presbyterian ministry and the unity of the churches of tihs presbytery."

Originally scheduled for May, the exchange was delayed until October after presbytery officials were temporarily unable to find placements for all three Negro ministers in the presbytery. Later, invitations to the three were extended by three white churches.

CHURCH'S POSSESSION—The Rev. Harold E. Beatty, pastor of the Georgetown Lutheran Church, Wisconsin ave. and Volta pl., displays a large German Bible printed in 1730. The church, founded in 1769 is planning a series of special events this month to mark its 180th anniversary

Georgetown Lutheran Church To Mark 180th Anniversary

Georgetown Lutheran Church, founded before the American Revolution, this month will celebrate its 180th anniversary with a series of special events.

The original log church was erected on the present site at Wisconsin ave. and Volta pl. in a wooded area known as "Knave's Disappointment," according to the Rev. Harold E. Beatty, present pastor.

Tradition says that the German Lutherans who founded the church carried their muskets to the area and stacked them nearby for protection from the Indians when they worked on the building.

The present stone building, erected in 1914, is the fourth in the church's history. During the Civil War nearly all of the early records of the church were destroyed.

One of the prized possessions of the church is a large old Bible, printed in Tubingen, Germany, in 1730.

An old church bell, believed to be more than 100 years old, hangs in a miniature steeple on the church lawn. The bell was originally the property of the church, and later was purchased by a Lutheran congregation in West Virginia. It was returned to the Georgetown congregation in 1943.

At 11 a. m. Sunday Paster Beatty will give an anniversary sermon entitled "How Firm a Foundation."

Other events scheduled for this month include: October 16, 11 a. m., sermon by the Rev. Dr. J. Frank Fife, president of the Lutheran Synod of Maryland, 8 p. m. concert by the National Lutheran Chorus; October 23, 11 a. m. service to honor old members, 5 p. m. organ concert and talk by the Rev. Dr. Clarence W. Cranford, pastor of Calvary Baptist Church.

Thursday, October 27, 7:30 p. m., anniversary dinner in the Reconstruction Finance Corporation building, 2d and E sts. nw., with the Rev. John L. Deaton, pastor of Christ Lutheran Church, Baltimore, as speaker; October 30, 11 a. m. Reformation Sunday, the Rev. Dr. Ed C. Cooper, pastor of the University Lutheran Chapel, Chapel Hill, N. C., as speaker.

Baptists End Revivals Here On Sunday

The two-week city-wide simultaneous evangelistic campaign in 27 Greater Washington Baptist Churches will close with revival services Sunday evening.

During the campaign, members of participating churches carried on a program of home visitation and special services in the churches each night.

Latest reports from the Rev. Dr. William J. Crowder, director of the Department of Missions of the D. C. Baptist Convention, showed that more than 430 persons have presented themselves for membership in Baptist churches.

In a letter to Dr. C. E. Matthews, director of the drive, Senator A. Willis Robertson (D., Va.) praised the Baptist leader for his efforts to "quicken the religious life of members of the city's Baptist churches. "There is a definite need here, as throughout the Nation generally, for church members to realistically face-up to the problems that confront us," he wrote.

Representatives of more than 50 churches are expected to attend the meeting, which is open to the public, according to the Rev. W. A. Wright, pastor of Bruen Chapel, Chesterbrook, Va.

Laymen Kill Bishops' Plea To Free COs

San Francisco, Oct. 7 (AP)—Lay leaders of the Episcopal church today overrode their bishop's advocacy of freedom for World War II conscientious objectors still in prison.

The House of Deputies, in the closing session of the church's triennial convention, voted nonconcurrence in the House of Bishops' resolution urging the Government to release these prisoners.

Also turned down was a proposal to permit lay readers to pass the chalice in Holy Communion services.

The deputies concurred in urging international control of Jerusalem.

A report showed:

The membership has grown to 2,293,389, an increase of 8.3 percent since 1946.

Communicants number 1,592,522, a net increase of 5.4 percent.

Yesterday the deputies overwhelmingly turned down the Bishop's attempt to change marriage canons.

The bishops proposed to allow the bishop to dissolve a marriage for causes arising during marriage.

World Rule Declared Aim Of Catholics

Dr. Joseph M. Dawson, executive director of the Baptist Joint Conference Committee on Public Affairs, charged last night the Catholic hierarchy seeks to capitalize on this country's financial resources to make the world Catholic.

He was addressing a religious rally sponsored by Protestants and Other Americans United for the Separation of Church and State at the Wesley Methodist Church. More than 100 persons attended. The Rev. C. Stanley Lowell, minister of the church, presided.

Dr. Dawson devoted most of his hour-long talk in attacking the Roman Catholic Church, which, he declared, "despises democracy as much as it does communism."

He said he was convinced that the Roman Catholic hierarchy designs to "capture the United States and make it the base for Catholizing the world."

He said he came to this conclusion after years of observation "—especially the years I have lived in Washington."

Dr. Dawson charged that the Roman Catholic hierarchy would like to see the United States go to war with Russia "to fight the battle of the Pope." If that should happen, and America were successful, the hierarchy would try to destroy democracy here in favor of its own rule, he declared.

Radar May Guide Surgeons

in many cases better than by X-rays, they reported.

The ultrasonic energy, sound waves well beyond the pitch of human hearing, are generated by a quartz crystal and transmitted through body tissues through direct contact with the skin. Reflections of the sound waves occur from the bones and from foreign substances which possess different acoustical properties than surrounding tissues.

Reflections of the sound waves, it was explained, are transformed into electrical impulses which are then amplified and displayed on a screen. Thus, a foreign body appears as an "echo" on the screen, in much the same manner as a plane in the sky shows up on radar screens. Distance of the "echo" from its initial sound sources gives the depth of the foreign body in the tissues.

Dr. Ludwig was assisted in the early stages of the work by the Naval Research Laboratory at Bellevue, D. C., and throughout the project by the General Precision Laboratory, of Pleasantville, N. Y. In its clinical phases, he was aided by the Harrison department of research surgery, University of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia.

A native of Johnstown, Pa., Dr. Ludwig received his medical degree from the University of Pennsylvania in 1946. He was on active duty as a naval lieutenant (junior grade) at the time of development of the technique.

Sesqui Fund Gets Approval

ifications for buildings can be developed.

Sesquicentennial sponsors have emphasized that taxes arising from the celebration will return to the Treasury more than the original appropriation.

The conferees knocked out of the section granting the Sesquicentennial money a provision for travel, hotel and other expenses, and for printing and binding work outside the Government Printing Office.

The conference group approved also $103,065.95 recommended by the Senate for the District to pay to Children's, Casualty and Emergency Hospitals for treating indigent patients during the 1948 fiscal year.

Erased from the bill by the conferees was a Senate-approved item of $11,660 for an assistant corporation counsel and two secretaries to handle legal work arising from the sales tax.

The bill carries a number of proved by both houses. These inproved by both Houses. These include $41,116.66 for the Tax Collector's office, $20,125 for regulatory agencies, $225,000 for improving the Bell Vocational School and $122,186.73 for District payments to the Federal courts here.

In another action, the Senate yesterday approved the conference report on the Interior appropriations bill and sent the measure to the White House.

It carries $1,050,000 for the Office of National Capital Parks, including funds to hire 40 additional park police here, and $12,000 for the Fine Arts Commission.

Oil Data Exchange Agreement Is Ended

New York, Oct. 7 (AP).—An agreement among major oil companies to exchange technical information on processing of petroleum until six months after the end of the war was declared terminated today.

The ruling was made by Supreme Court Referee Isidor Wasservogel, who held that for purposes of the pact World War II ended July 25, 1947, and that the six-month period was up January 25, 1948.

A suit to terminate the agreement was brought by Universal Oil Products Co. against the Shell Development Co., Standard Oil Development Co. and others.

Newspaperboy Day

This newspaper comes to you today—and every day of the year—through the courtesy of your local carrier boy. He is an indispensable factor in the complex process which brings an account of the world from the remote places where yesterday's varied events occurred, via wire services and city rooms, through the skilled hands of linotype operators, compositors, stereotypers, pressmen and delivery trucks, into his hands for deposit on your doorstep before breakfast. In some respects, his is the most arduous task of all. For it must be performed speedily and accurately regardless of wind or rain or snow or ice. And the carrier boy is generally the newspaper's one personal contact with the reader.

The job needs youngsters of energy, initiative, reliability and intelligence. Because it can be done successfully only by boys who have these attributes, it is not at all surprising that a great many men who have risen in life to places of influence and distinction started their working careers as local newspaperboys. We don't make a hard and fast guarantee that anyone who delivers The Washington Post will end up in the White House. There's a wealth of experience to show, however, that he will have a start in the right direction. On this day dedicated to them nationally, we salute the newspaperboys of the country with affection and respect.

Radford's Case

When Admiral Radford accuses the Air Force of "undermining unification" by failure to coordinate its B-36 bomber program with the other services, he is poking into a hornet's nest. We seem to remember that the Navy ran into some little difficulty about lack of coordination on the late lamented supercarrier. In charging that the B-36 fleet constitutes a "billion-dollar blunder," the admiral is merely dressing up language that already has been applied to the Navy. The truth is that both the Navy and Air Force have been guilty of insufficient consideration for the whole defense. For Admiral Radford to paint the Air Force as all black is merely to engage in more of the same negativism of which the Navy already has exhibited too much.

Anyone who has read this newspaper knows that it has entertained many doubts about the practical utility of the B-36 and the related overemphasis on strategic bombing. Aside from the basic strategic question involved, the B-36 leaves much to be desired in speed, ability to fend off interceptors and ability to conduct precision bombing. But the decision to concentrate on the B-36 was determined by the need to choose the best plane now available for the purpose envisaged. When Admiral Radford speaks of "more effective and more efficient planes for the task than the B-36" he ought to document his argument.

Admiral Radford hits pay dirt, however, when he assails the blitz warfare school of "cheap and easy victory" through strategic bombing. It is impossible to assess now all the implications of the Russian atomic bomb, but certainly one effect should be to bring a reexamination of the merits of strategic bombing as a major reliance. If the value of strategic bombing is in effect neutralized, then a strong ground force in western Europe assumes new importance—and with it fighters, low-altitude bombers and the whole realm of tactical aviation in which the Air Force is weak.

Three points raised by Admiral Radford's testimony confirm the wisdom of the House Armed Services Committee investigation. The fundamental question, of course, is strategic—whether long-range atomic bombing is now a feasible safeguard. The second is whether, if intercontinental bombing has a place, the B-36 is capable of executing it. This is a point that must be demonstrated, for words will not settle the dispute. The third point is whether the whole interservice row does not make necessary a new look at roles and missions. The House committee of course cannot make decisions in this respect; what it can do is make sure that the Joint Chiefs of Staff take adequate account of factors which previously may have been ignored in determining strategy.

This newspaper has emphasized many times that who is to do a particular job is of far less importance than that the job be done efficiently. In this respect there are several tasks now assigned to the Navy, such as mine-laying, which Air Force planes might accomplish more effectively. There is no reason why carrier-based planes should not be used over land under certain specialized conditions. But jealousy over service prerogatives has prevented the development of true integration based on the best use of all available instruments. Perhaps such integration, as between the Air Force and the Navy, will not come until there is one combined air arm—and such a move would have merit only if it could overcome the one-strategy panaceas and the exclusiveness with which the two services now regard their functions. But a start can at least be made by focusing attention on the battle of semantics which the current row over air power has become.

Arms And The Plan

What the President still has to decide is whether the Atlantic Allies in their defense plans have met the specifications of Congress for an "integrated" defense. Till he is so satisfied the money allotted for the arms program beyond the initial 100 million dollars will be withheld. The real burden of proof that congressional conditions have been fulfilled will be upon the military committee of professionals who are currently meeting under General Bradley's chairmanship. The defense ministers on their part have given them a mandate bearing out the will of Congress in the agreement which they signed after their conference on Wednesday. They accepted the "principle of integrated defense," and "all agreed that each party must do its part, as determined by its position and its resources, to contribute to the common security of all." The principle now has to be spelled out in the deliberations of the professionals.

Nobody will underrate the difficulties of working out in detail the unity that the Congress specified. It is nothing less than a restatement of roles and missions in relation both to the groupings within the Atlantic combination and to the entire combination. Each party's effort, in other words, will be assessed in terms of its contribution to a supranational defense to be planned in common. This noncompetitive and nonduplicating view of Atlantic defense corresponds to present-day realities of human existence and of the nature of war. The greatest responsibility belongs to the United States as the dominant military power. All the other parties realize that the United States must exercise the role of first among equals if the Alliance is to be effective. That means, surely, the end of the system of American observers in the regional groupings in Europe—an end which was pledged by the Foreign Ministers when they outlined the organization which the Defense Ministers have now endowed with guiding principles. The United States was pledged in the Foreign Ministers' statement "to participate actively" in the work of the regional planning groups.

If there had been any doubt as to the wisdom of this, surely it was shattered by the A-bomb explosion in Russia. Thoughts on this momentous event are still in process of crystallization. Obliteration by long-range atomic bombing—hitherto an American monopoly—could now be mutual, and, for that reason, this strategical doctrine may be due for the discard. In other words, the A-bomb may become in fact as neutralized as poisoned gas, without, however, being formally banished in view of its value as a reserve instrument of terror. At least new considerations are involved, all pointing to more emphasis on the land defense of Europe by a military establishment aided by land-based and carrier-based air support. (It is, incidentally, of considerable importance that the Vinson Committee which is now going over the Navy-Air Force row should bend an ear to the members of the military men of the Atlantic Alliance who are now in conference.) Such a revision of strategical concepts clearly underlines rather than detracts from the need for integration of Atlantic defense.

Now, to repeat, nobody expects the professionals to put on the President's desk within the next few days a plan all neatly tied up with pink ribbon for integrated defense and unity of command. Fixed plans, anyway, are anathema. The President would doubtless be satisfied with a framework of all-in operation so that the money could be appropriated in the few weeks remaining of the life of the present session of Congress.

Blockade's End

Five and one half months of economic paralysis is the price of the agreement finally reached between the International Longshoremen's Union and the Hawaiian stevedoring companies. It is impossible to assess accurately the full cost to Hawaii of the prolonged shipping tieup, but estimates run to 100 million dollars. Even though some cargoes have reached the islands during the last few weeks under governmental operation of the docks, the Territory will not easily recover from the disruption, reflected in record unemployment, that it has suffered. No economic group, union or employer, should have the unrestricted power to inflict such a toll on the public with impunity.

If Congress has any concern for its overseas wards, it will not ignore the lesson of the Hawaii strike even though the urgency is now removed. Shipping is the lifeline of Hawaii as well as Alaska. There must be more effective means of protecting the public from stoppage of this vital utility, more effective means of inducing the compromises and concessions which both sides ultimately made anyhow in the Hawaii strike. If this leads to compulsory arbitration, with the Government dictating the final terms of settlement, then that is the price the disputants will have to pay. For twentieth century society is too complex to permit a continuation of the periodic economic holdups which outlying Territories suffer because of union or management intransigeance.

Civil Defense

Probably the most foolish thing the United States could do in consequence of the Russian atomic bomb would be to carry out the mass dispersal of industry and population sometimes pictured as the only atomic defense. The disruption caused by such a move would be paralyzing, the cost unfathomable, and the possible effect would be to throw the economy into the sort of tailspin the Russians have been waiting for. This does not mean, however, that civil defense planning has to remain the indefinite and static thing it is today.

Mr. Bernard Baruch has urged the enactment of standby legislation for the rationing, wage and price controls that would be imperative in an emergency. Although we believe that drafts of such legislation should be kept in readiness for instant use, we do not see the need for actual passage, for congressional action in emergency could be obtained automatically. What is more important is that the other aspects of civil defense, including an over-all mobilization plan and guidance to States and communities, should not be left in the "iffy" stage.

Since last March the job of civil defense planning has belonged to the National Security Resources Board, where it was placed by the President as an alternative to giving the responsibility to the Secretary of Defense as recommended in the Hopley Report on Civil Defense for National Security. Although the NSRB has done some talking about civil defense, there is precious little indication that it has developed anything more than a plan for planning.

It may not be necessary to organize a corps of air-raid wardens or to build elaborate bomb shelters at this time. But, certainly, if the principal responsibility for civil defense is to be decentralized to States and communities as provided in the Hopley Report, there ought to be adequate instructions from the Federal Government and correlation of the individual efforts. Community plans ought to be drawn, and there ought at least to be training of key personnel and a skeleton organization in readiness.

How much of the indecision is due to lack of leadership in the NSRB is hard to determine. The NSRB is still in flux while the deadwood is being cut out. But constructive action must start sometime, and if the inaction is a reflection of the continuing staff dispute over whether to develop mere studies or practical plans, then bold leadership is imperative. In any event, it is inexcusable for the President to leave the Security Resources Board and its companion agency, the Munitions Board, without guidance when the necessity for mobilization planning has been demonstrated with such a startling jolt.

Robert E. Hannegan

Robert E. Hannegan's death is a fresh reminder of the large part that chance and the personal element play in our public affairs. Mr. Hannegan, the son of a policeman who got his start as a ward politician in St. Louis, was more responsible than any other individual for putting Harry Truman in the White House. In 1940 he played an active part in the renomination of Mr. Truman for the Senate, and the latter gave Mr. Hannegan credit for his victory in the election. Senator Truman, in turn, insisted on the appointment of Hannegan as collector of internal revenue at St. Louis in 1942. From that point on Hannegan's own political dynamism and executive ability maneuvered him into the role of kingmaker.

Under his skillful management the moribund internal revenue office at St. Louis was transformed into an efficient organization. The result was advancement of Mr. Hannegan to be Commissioner of Internal Revenue in Washington. Early in 1944 President Roosevelt decided that the Democratic Party needed Mr. Hannegan's talents as an organizer and money collector more than the Government did. Accordingly, he was transferred to the chairmanship of the Democratic National Committee. As such, he coldly concluded that Vice President Henry Wallace should not again be on the Democratic ticket. Apparently it was wholly a political decision. President Roosevelt, with his genius for feeling the public pulse, heeded Mr. Hannegan's advice. There is every indication that, with a less energetic and alert party chairman, the nomination would again have gone to Mr. Wallace and he would have succeeded to the Presidency at Mr. Roosevelt's death.

With Wallace out, Mr. Roosevelt's first choice for the Vice Presidency was Justice Douglas. Once more Mr. Hannegan intervened to get the name of Harry Truman ahead of Justice Douglas' in the letter that the President sent to the Chicago convention in 1944. When Mr. Truman took up the cudgels for his friend in 1942, he could have had no thought of advancing a man who would make him President of the United States. But since then he has often acknowledged the debt. It was ill-health that drove Mr. Hannegan out of politics and out of his position as Postmaster General at the early age of 44. Perhaps he would never have become a Mark Hanna in any event. But his ability to act powerfully and sensibly when decisions that fate has made momentous were in the making has given his name a secure place in the party history of our times.

AUTUMN MOVEMENT

The purple grapes invite the fox;
The rusty sawing of a note
By katydid beside the phlox
Twice tells his autumn tale by rote;
And summer slips from every side
Through garden gate with flower and leaf;
And wise eyed owls by chimneys hide

Handicapped Workers

As the annual observance of National Employ the Physically Handicapped Week temporarily holds the Nation's stage, I wish to voice my appreciation to the editors and reporters of The Washington Post for their cooperation during the past four years in all matters connected with the employment or rehabilitation of the handicapped worker, whether veteran or nonveteran.

It was the desire of the President to focus public attention upon the ability side of the ledger and to reemphasize the disability page that led to the establishment of the President's committee on National Employ the Physically Handicapped Week in the Department of Labor.

The Washington Post has been represented on the committee since its inception and through its news and editorial columns has contributed much to the year-around campaign to put the handicapped worker into proper focus where his true abilities will receive equality of consideration and opportunity.

In behalf of the handicapped workers who may have found jobs through your help and the employers who found trained and capable workers through the information you provided, I am happy to express my sincere thanks.

Invoking Taft-Hartley

President Truman has branded the Taft-Hartley Act as a slave law which he stubbornly and tenaciously refuses to enforce. Such a flagrant disregard of duty is a gratuitous insult to the Congress, whose members are equally as guilty as the President himself if they continue to sit tacitly by and permit him to go unpunished for his failure to observe his oath of office by refusing to enforce a law which is as mandatory upon him as it is upon those whom it sought to regulate.

Still the President states very vehemently, despite his illegal and unwarranted departure from the law by creating a fact finding board different from that prescribed by law whose findings have brought about a Nation-wide strike in the steel industry, that he proposes to remain aloof from further participation in a controversy which he created.

Small Builders

The little builder, his name is legion. He is the fellow who, between two great wars, constructed about 75 percent of all of our small houses, both here and in Great Britain. Serviced by over 27,000 local building material dealers, aided by local mortgage people, sans FHA, and knowing his customers personally because they are often his friends and neighbors, he can be counted on to plug away for the next 10 years. His individual products are insignificant, but in the aggregate enormously important.

Look at what the Department of Agriculture has done for the little farmer. A real accomplishment. Consider its ways and get wise. ROBBERT TAPPAN.

Newspaperboy Week

I noticed in your October 6 paper that this is National Newspaper Week. I can think of no better time to comment on the excellent service we receive from our paper carrier, Teddy Payne of Franklin Park, Va. Never does he fail to bring our paper, in all sorts of weather, and always early. This means a great deal to me, as I enjoy The Washington Post above all others in Washington. I think your paper should give this boy some special award and I commend him very highly and feel that when we have a boy who is conscientious, he should receive some praise.

Teddy has served your paper a number of years, he is most courteous and punctual. If your paper could print up a little piece on this boy, I know he would be glad to know he is appreciated.

Transit Radio

It is a matter of extreme curiosity to me that such an uproar could have developed over such a small matter as music aboard a public vehicle.

How much time, on the average, do transit riders spend aboard these "musical madhouses?" I'd say about one hour and a half a day. And what would they be doing in that time which they can't do with the music? I have yet to board one of these "psychological weapons" where the sound was more than pleasantly audible. Due to an automatic control employed by the radio station, the speech is somewhat louder than the music, but those commercials, though more frequent now than at first, are not high pressure.

The middle-level popular music employed in the transit format does not seem odious to me. I have heard some people say that they enjoy it at home but find it nerve-wracking in the cars and buses. This seems most peculiar.

Now the solution offered of placing signs on the radio-equipped vehicles, if harassed friends can't take the trouble to observe the antennae on the roof-tops, is a sensible one I feel and perhaps will put an end to this controversy.

"Chinese Gold"

Your recent editorials on China suggest that you are more concerned with helping the State Department to "save face" by covering up its disastrous blunders in China, than with saving the Far East from Communist domination. Or are you still clinging to the illusion that the Chinese Communists are not "real" Communists, as was contended by the State Department "experts" according to the evidence in the White Paper?

In your September 13 editorial, "Chinese Gold," you challenged Senator Tydings to give the source of his denial of Dean Acheson's assertion that the Chinese Communists had obtained their American arms from "the fleeting Nationalist armies." Can you prove that they did?

Since it is known that large quantities of lend-lease supplies were shipped across the Pacific to Russia after Germany's defeat (for use against Japan in a war the Russians never fought), is it not a logical assumption that this was the source of supply of American equipment to the Chinese Communist armies?

However, according to the observations of United States military observers and ordnance experts in China the Communist armies are for the most part equipped with Japanese arms. According to an Associated Press correspondent in Tokyo (where there must be reliable information concerning Japan's former war potential in Manchuria), the Red army was in a position to supply its Chinese allies with sufficient Japanese arms to equip an army of a million men for 10 years.

As against these huge supplies available to the Communists, the United States at the beginning of 1946, when General Marshall imposed an embargo on arms to China, had supplied the Nationalists with only enough light arms and ammunition to supply an army of half a million men for six months at most.

It is significant that the State Department has not published any detailed quantity figures concerning aid to China. By lumping together everything from aspirin to zippers it has obscured the fact that only small quantities of the light arms and ammunition required to suppress the Communist rebellion were given to the Nationalists. How then can you maintain with such certainty that it was not lack of American aid which defeated the Chinese Nationalists?

Not only did General Marshall place an embargo on arms to the anti-Communist forces in China. By his insistence on recurrent truces whenever the Nationalists were winning the ascendancy, he enabled the Communists to build up their strength and win time to acquire proficiency in the use of the weapons supplied to them by Moscow.

Moreover President Truman's insistence, as late as December, 1946, on the establishment of a coalition government in China was naturally interpreted to mean that America did not wish the Chinese to resist Communist domination. How could the Nationalist armies be expected to maintain their morale when it seemed that even the United States wanted them to travel the same road as Czechoslovakia?

As regards Senator Connally's charge that Chiang Kai-shek "deserted" his people, and absconded to Formosa with the gold reserves of the National government, what would you have had the generalissimo do? Ought he to have left the gold in Shanghai for the Communists to make use of? Did you consider it a crime for the Polish government in 1939 to remove whatever funds it could from Warsaw to London, after the Germans and Russians had conquered and divided Poland? In the event of a Russian invasion of the United States would you accuse President Truman of embezzlement if he removed the gold at Fort Knox to a safe place rather than let the Communists capture it?

You ask why "there is no effort to sequester" the three quarters of a billion dollars believed to have been deposited here by Chinese citizens. Yet you admit the National government long ago vainly requested that we provide it with information concerning such balances.

You speak of "the lack of faith" among the Chinese themselves as the reason why all Chinese capital abroad has not been made available for use in the war against the Communists. Yet you do not cite any example of the capitalists of other countries voluntarily sacrificing all their funds in the national interest. Nor do you demand that the French, for instance, who are supposed to have some four billion dollars "cached" in America, should have their private funds confiscated before any more Marshall Plan aid is given to France.

No one denies the shortcomings of the Chinese National government. But is it not high time that we ceased to demand that all our friends measure up to our high democratic standards? Why are we ready to help Tito, who stands for everything we abhor, while refusing aid to Chiang Kai-shek, who at least has the merit of having proved his loyalty to the democratic cause during all the years when China was resisting Japan alone, and American capitalists were doing good business supplying the Japanese with the sinews of war? FREDA UTLEY.

War of Words Preparedness

By Malvina Lindsay

How To Talk Politics

SUDDENLY realizing that the 1950 campaign was well under way, I rushed to the nearest charm school to freshen up my political conversation. I was shown into the office of a retired slogan and speech writer, who, according to diplomas on his walls, had worked for every political group of this century, including the IWWs and the Liberty League.

"I want," I told him, "to shine in salons and other assemblages, by my clever and profound discussion of the political issues in the 1950 campaign, including the atom bomb."

"That can be done in one easy lesson," he assured me. "It's all a matter of vocabulary and lung power." He picked up two lists of words. "Now the trick is to shout the right name at the right person, and I may add, the left name at the left person."

"But what I want," I explained, "are political arguments, opinions, bon mots—also ideas to prevent war."

"You will note," he went on, "that one of these lists is topped by the word 'statist'."

"It's too shopworn. Besides I want political discussion."

"The more bewhiskered a political word the better," blandly continued my mentor. "Now (statist) shrieked ominously or hissed insinuatingly will carry you through virtually every argument in prosperous circles."

"BUT I want something scintillating to say about the Taft-Hartly Act——"

"You will note," interrupted my instructor," that your other list is headed with the word 'troglodyte.'"

"What's a troglodyte?"

"It doesn't matter. It sounds nasty. But see I have listed some simpler alternatives—fogy, dodo, fossil, tory, Bourbon, hardshell, reactionary, Neanderthal man. These should be hurled contemptuously."

"But," I insisted, "how can I dispose of the Brannan Plan in two simple but brilliant sentences?"

"You will, of course," he said, ignoring my question, "use the second list of names in, shall we say, the more folksy gatherings? In some of these groups you may also roar 'antilabor,' in fact anti-anything. You may even cry 'Fascist!'"

"But how can I silence everyone by saying authoritatively, 'Now the whole point about national health insurance is——'"

"Refer to your first list again," interrupted my coach. "Note I have listed the word 'pink' under 'statist.' That should be uttered in a suspicious, accusing tone. But watch out for that word 'Red'! There's still danger of legal action there. However, you may shout indignantly when a person has said something you don't approve. "That's Red propaganda!'—then hastily add: 'Of course I'm not saying you're a Red.'"

"But I want to discuss brightly the Minimum Wage Act in a gathering, say of Republicans and Dixiecrats."

"Now of course," loftily went on my instructor "you can always bellow with safety, 'Collectivist! Anarchist!'"

"But not at the same person," I cried. "They're exactly opposite. The dictionary says——"

"Come now! You wouldn't stoop so low as to draw the dictionary on anyone in a political argument!"

"VERY WELL. But how can I be clarifying and fascinating about civil rights?"

Let's finish with that first list. Note the word 'radical.' It can sound terrifying if growled correctly. Then there is 'theorist.' It should be snarled. Take 'do-gooder.' It should be mockingly rolled on the tongue. There's a lot to the sound of words in name calling—I mean political discussion. Hence I've made a third list of words that sound menacing enough to be used by anybody on any side of any question. Listen how they sound: bigot, demagogue, nihilist, terrorist, polyglot, lollipop, brontosaurus, Broddingnagian, thingumabob, dodaddle——"

"Listen you Neanderthal phony!" I shouted. "I paid for brilliant political discussion!"

"All right, how's this? Suppose someone proposes some kind of action—anything from electing a dog catcher to organizing a picnic. You speak up 'That sounds all right, but if we start it WHERE'S it going to stop!' Or suppose in a different group inaction is proposed——"

"Wait," I interrupted. "I'm sick of this left-right business. I don't think everybody who disagrees with me is either a statist or a Colonel Blimp. I'm interested in the middle road——"

"Sister," said my instructor, rising," "you better stay out of politics. In fact you better go home and stay there."

Washington Calling

By Marquis Childs

Congress In Court

ONE OF the most remarkable cases to be heard in any court in a long time has just been argued before the Circuit Court of Appeals in Philadelphia. The question to be decided is whether members of Congress shall have the right to go into the Federal courts and act for clients in return for fees paid.

Childs

If the answer is yes, then the influence industry in Washington will take a new and bolder turn. If that practice is declared legal, there undoubtedly will be a rush to hire influential lawyer-members of Congress. Election to Congress could become a license to engage in the lucrative practice of law on the influence level.

Those who argue for the right of Congressmen to go into the Federal courts for fees insist that since the practice was not specifically forbidden by the founding fathers it must, therefore, be legal. But I doubt that the founding fathers ever dreamed of a time when the elected representatives of the people would offer themselves for hire to individuals or corporations.

One thing that makes this case so extraordinary is that you have two branches of the Government—legislative and judicial—carrying their dispute to an appeals court. It is a quaint example of what can happen under our system of divided powers.

The dispute began when Representative Earl Chudoff of Pennsylvania appeared in Federal District Court here last May representing a client charged with sending obscene matter through the mails. The judge was James P. McGranery, former Congressman and former assistant to the Attorney General.

JUDGE McGRANERY told Chudoff he would be violating the law if he appeared in court. Chudoff's reply was that other members of Congress had done the same thing and, therefore, he saw no reason why he should be forbidden.

McGranery was perfectly well aware of what Chudoff meant. A recent conspicuous instance was that of another Pennsylvanian, Representative Francis E. Walter, now serving his ninth term in the House. Walter took a fee of $170,000 for representing stockholders in a suit against the Pennroad Corp. and the Pennsylvania Railroad.

But the judge stood his ground. Chudoff's suit is to compel McGranery and other Federal judges in eastern Pennsylvania to permit him to appear in their courts.

McGranery, it seems to me, has shown great courage in refusing to be intimidated in this matter. He must himself pay any costs in connection with the suit since the judiciary is not provided with a fund to defend itself from the Legislature. His attorney is Joseph W. Henderson, a former president of the American Bar Association.

A curious aspect of this curious suit is that the case in which Chudoff originally wanted to appear for a client was a relatively minor one. There must be those back of Chudoff who have far more at stake and who, therefore, are determined to get a ruling that will make it all legal.

ONLY A few members of Congress have thus far gone into the courts for pay. But the members of Senate and House, most of whom are lawyers, would not be likely in the absence of a specific ruling to take such a step.

The relation between Congress and the judiciary is very close. Members of Senate and House Judiciary Committees pass on the qualification of judges newly nominated and those raised from lower to higher courts.

Representative Walter is ranking majority member of the House Judiciary Committee. Obviously, if he appears in a Federal court, he is not just another lawyer. Even the most upright of judges cannot help but think of his own advancement.

It is here that McGranery's courage in standing his ground is conspicuous. He will certainly not endear himself to those members of Congress who want to legalize their private law practice.

Congressmen are, of course, specifically forbidden to appear for fees before departments and agencies of the Federal Government. McGranery's contention is that the Federal courts were not included in this ban merely because the founding fathers could not conceive of a time when there would be a vast body of Federal criminal law such as exists today.

Senior judge of the Appeals Court hearing this strange case is John Biggs of Wilmington, Del. Judge Biggs not long ago drew down the wrath of Southern Congressmen who denounced him for refusing to honor a writ of extradition from the State of Georgia returning a prisoner to a Georgia chain gang.

To blur the lines that separate the dividend powers of our Government is to risk the very existence of an independent judiciary. That is the reason this case is so important and why it should finally be passed upon by the Supreme Court.

Belle Haven Apartment Request Turned Down

The Fairfax County board of zoning appeal yesterday turned down a request for permission to erect an apartment development on 110 acres known as the Bucknell property on Fort Hunt rd., just south of Belle Haven.

The board denied the special use request after hearing protests from a number of Belle Haven residents that the project would cause a traffic hazard, depreciate property values and necessitate tax increases.

supports for agricultural products, to maintain farm income on a parity with farm operating costs; an intensified soil conservation system . . ."

"I campaigned on that platform," Lucas declared, "and took it to mean what it said." He then added with meaningful emphasis:

"The Senator from Illinois was a member of the resoultions committee that wrote that plank, and it was acceptable to the President of the United States."

Barkley didn't get a chance to show his choice in yesterday's voting, because he can vote only in a tie.

The vote showed how badly the party had split on the issue:

1. Although Lucas and Anderson voted for the Anderson bill, they were bitterly opposed by the party's Agriculture Committee chairman, Elmer Thomas of Oklahoma, who once threatened that if high price supports were defeated, he would offer the Brannan plan as a substitute.

Late last night Thomas was still threatening to do so Monday. He declared that "today's vote was a vote for a depression," pointing out that high price supports continue under the Anderson plan for all of 1950, Thomas added:

"We'll change it again next year." Pressed by newsmen, he predicted that next year's change might mean the Brannan plan.

2. Only one more Democrat lined up behind Lucas and the Administration's former Cabinet member, Anderson, than Republicans. The tally showed 23 Democrats and 22 Republicans supporting the change.

3. On the other hand more than twice as many Democrats as Republicans favored high price supports—the scale that Barkley had supported, and which it was claimed the White House favors. The vote on this was 18 Democrats and 8 Republicans.

4. Although the Republicans voted 22 to 8 in favor of Anderson's bill, the minority leader, Senator Kenneth S. Wherry of Nebraska, voted the other way.

The vote showed almost an even split among Republican Senators who attended the recent GOP farm belt rally at Sioux City. Of these Aiken (Vermont), Hickenlooper (Iowa), and Thye (Minnesota) voted with Anderson, while Mundt (South Dakota) and Wherry voted for high supports.

Although the Sioux City meeting was designed to find out what the Midwest farmers wanted, yesterday's results showed it failed to accomplish much in that line.

Six Senators switched their votes between Tuesday and yesterday, from the Young-Russell amendment for permanent 90 per cent supports, to the lower Anderson program. They were Cordon (R., Oreg.), Hayden (D., Ariz.), Hunt (D., Wyo.), Johnson (D., Colo.), O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.) and Watkins (R., Nebr.).

Three who voted for the high levels Tuesday were paired yesterday. They were Kefauver (paired with Gillette, who voted with Anderson Tuesday), McCarthy (R., Wis.) (paired with Taft who was not voting Tuesday, and McKellar (D., Tenn.) (paired with Ellender, who also was not recorded Tuesday).

Pepper (D., Fla.) and Withers (D., Ky.) who voted for the higher scales Tuesday were absent, and Thomas (D., Utah), who was absent Tuesday, voted with Anderson yesterday.

Byrd and Robertson of Virginia and O'Conor of Maryland all voted against the high rates. Tydings of Maryland was absent.

Only two more amendments remain to be voted on when the Senate considers the bill again Monday, unless Thomas should carry out his threat to submit the Brannan plan as a substitute.

The Anderson bill, on which the Senate was acting, is a rewrite of the Aiken portion of the Agriculture Act of 1948— passed by a Republican Congress. The only important change is that the Anderson bill postpones the date when 90 percent of parity for basic crops changes to a sliding scale at 75 to 90 percent of parity instead of 72 to 90. It picks up the same modernized parity formula. The basic crops are wheat, corn, peanuts, cotton, tobacco and rice.

The Brannan plan, which has not been submitted, is the program approved by President Truman. It provides for the same sort of price supports for basic commodities as the Anderson plan. However, for nonbasic crops, such as potatoes, pork, eggs and dairy products, it would let them sell in the market for what they would bring. The Government would make up the difference to the farmers through Government subsidy. Supporters of the Brannan plan insist it would greatly reduce the cost of food without cutting down the farmers' income.

The delay in getting bill out of the way yesterday may upset plans for adjournment next Saturday. If passed Monday, the bill still has to go to conference with the House. Few expect an early agreement. In fact, many predict the conference will not be able to agree. The House already has voted for continued high price supports.

If conferences doesn't end in agreement, the Aiken bill, with lower price props next year, will become law.

The day's debate was marked by several high spots:

1. Thomas offered a letter from Agriculture Secretary Brannan that indicated a complete break between Brannan and his predecessor in office, Anderson. Brannan took issue with statements by Anderson that the higher level of price supports would "cost two billion dollars a year."

Instead, Brannan said, the extra cost of 90 percent of parity over the Anderson scale would be "relatively small."

2. At one point, Anderson angrily told Young that the latter's amendment to support commodities at 90 percent of parity when their growers accepted marketing quotas was a sell-out of his "wheat farmers in favor of those who grow cotton, peanuts and tobacco." Young, who comes from a wheat State, North Dakota, was joined in his amendment by Russell of the cotton, tobacco, and peanut State of Georgia.

Russell immediately challenged Anderson about dragging sectionalism into a farm debate. He declared that such an action was unfair.

1950 Economy Looks Good, Truman Told

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

Chairman Edwin G. Nourse of the Council of Economic Advisers said yesterday he could see the United States enjoying a period of prosperity through 1950, provided there were "good management" and freedom from prolonged strikes.

He made the statement at the White House after he and his two colleagues on the council presented their quarterly report to the President.

On grounds that the report was confidentially made to Mr. Truman, council members refused to discuss its contents. But from Nourse's comment, and other indications of the council's point of view, it appeared that the report was optimistic in tone and foresaw a continuation, at least for some months, of the present upward economic trends.

Nourse denied he had recently forecast a "boom" for 1950, as was reported yesterday. There are too many unknown factors in the situation to make any such prophecy possible, he said.

But the "underlying situation is one of great economic strength," he said. "With good management we can certainly have prosperity not merely for the rest of this year, but also continuing through the next."

Strikes, he went on, are the key to the situation. The general feeling, he indicated, was that if the present steel and coal stoppages are settled in less than a month, the country could surmount the difficulties that would ensue.

"It is when such strikes extend a full month or beyond," he continued, "that you have basic trouble."

By his timetable, a reporter suggested, the coal strike should begin to be damaging in about two weeks, since it has already run for two weeks.

Nourse agreed the effects would be felt in about that time, and earlier than the effects of the steel strike.

Nourse's concern with the "key" role which strikes may play in the economy is not entirely shared, it was learned yesterday, by some members of the council's staff and by certain other Government economists.

A more generally held opinion is that while long strikes in coal and steel would certainly be most damaging to the national economy, their avoidance would not mean, by itself, that there is clear sailing ahead.

Some of Nourse's staff also hold a more bearish view than that thought to be contained in the quarterly report. They feel that while there may be a rising economic activity in the next three or four months, the probabilities are that there will be a resumption of the gradual downward trend that began early this year and continued until August.

former treasurer and director of the Tampa Shipbuilding Co. He is also, by appointment of the Governor, a member of the Florida Improvement Commission set up to finance public buildings, roads, toll bridges and ferries. Broadwater was born 53 years ago in South Carolina.

Former members of the transit board whose places were filled yesterday were: Edwin C. Graham, former president and board chairman of the Hamilton National Bank; G. L. Nicholson, board chairman of the District of Columbia Paper Mills, Inc.; James E. Colliflower, president of the firm bearing his name, and Edmund L. Jones, Capital Transit general counsel.

Health Reasons Given

A formal announcement by the transit company said that both Graham and Nicholson resigned "for reasons of health and their desire to be less active in the business affairs of the community." Graham had been a Transit director since the company's organization in 1933. Nicholson had been a member of the board since 1938.

Colliflower and Jones were the two newest directors. They were elected in April, 1949. They resigned to permit further representation of the Wolfson group on the board.

The company statement added that Robert V. Fleming, president and board chairman of the Riggs National Bank, resigned as chairman of Capital Transit's executive committeee "in order that those representing the majority of the stock could have the representation they desire."

Fleming remains a member of the executive committee along with Bell, L. E. Wolfson, G. Thomas Dunlop, J. E. Heberle and E. D. Merrill.

At yesterday's meeting William B. Bennett, vice president and secretary of Capital Transit, was named secretary of the executive committee.

AFL to Seek Million New Members in '50

St. Paul, Minn., Oct. 7 (AP).—The American Federation of Labor today announced a drive to sign up a million new union members in 1950 to bolster labor's political strength.

The AFL convention approved a policy statement calling for a coordinated political and member organizing drive in the coming election year.

"These two gigantic efforts," the convention statement said, "cannot help but increase the prestige and membership of the AFL and at the same time protect the welfare and democracy of all organized workers."

Charles MacGowan, president of the Boilermakers Union, and one of the AFL's top political leaders, said that by adding one million new members to AFL ranks "Our political job will be made that much easier."

Claims Eight Million Now

The big labor organization presently claims eight million members. It acquired only 20,000 new members in the past year even though almost two million dollars was sent by the National AFL organization, plus sums spent by local unions adding to many times that figure.

So the million members is an ambitious goal. The convention already has approved plans for the AFL's biggest splash in politics in next year's congressional elections.

A speech by George N. Craig, new national commander of the American Legion — cautioning against increasing Government welfare laws and Federal powers —caused a stir among delegates.

They had just adopted a series of resolutions favoring an expanded Social Security program, Government health insurance, and Federal aid to education and middle income housing.

Wants State of Welfare

"The American Legion wants a state of welfare in America but not a welfare state," Craig told the convention. "It is the able-bodied, free American citizen's own responsibility to assure his economic security through his own hard work, thrift and enterprise.

"We do not believe that social security should be primarily and exclusively a Government responsibility."

Craig said welfare systems should be bargained out by labor and management to keep "economic policy-making in these United States in private hands."

The Legion chief got polite applause from delegates when he finished. But George Meany, the AFL's secretary-treasurer, asked later for comment on Craig's speech, told reporters:

"The Legion changes commanders every year but they all make the same old reactionary speeches reflecting the economic philosophy of Wall Street and the National Association of Manufacturers."

Ewing Not Concerned

Oscar Ewing, Federal Security Administrator, told the delegates afterward that he wasn't "concerned that any of you would be converted" by Craig's speech.

In contrast to the Legion commander, Ewing's speech went down the line in supporting the major welfare aims of the Truman Administration's Fair Deal program.

Ewing hit out against the American Medical Association for opposing the Administration's national health insurance proposal.

"The fact of the matter is," Ewing said, "the AMA and its fellow travelers are more concerned with the control of medicine than they are with the advancement of medicine.

"The AMA and its fellow travelers are now firmly in league with those elements of our political life who are so busy concocting new words for the reactionary vocabulary that they have overlooked the constitutional provision about promoting the general welfare."

President's Calling List

President Truman yesterday had the following White House appointments:

10:00 a. m.—Cabinet.
11:00—Representative Bentsen
11:15—Mrs. India Edwards, of Texas and delegation, head of Democratic Committee's women's division.

Steel, Coal Strikes Threaten To Spread to Other Industries are located at New Kensington, Pa.; Alcoa, Tenn.; Edgewater, N. J.; Mobile, Ala.; Baden, N. C.; Detroit, Mich.; Richmond, Ind.; Bridgeport, Conn.; Bauxite, Ark.

In announcing the aluminum strike plans, the union said:

"This action has been taken because repeated negotiating conferences have failed to produce any agreement. The company has not agreed to any wage increases, has rejected the union's urgent request for paid holidays and an adequate wage adjustment agreement, and has not agreed to a pension and social insurance agreement acceptable to the union."

Leaders of 110,000 railway firemen and enginemen met in Chicago yesterday to consider a Nation-wide walkout to demand the hiring of an extra fireman on diesel engines. The union demand was turned down in mid-September by an emergency Presidential board. Earliest the rail workers can walk out, under the law, is October 19. The firemen contend a second fireman is needed on diesel engines for safety reasons.

At Camden, N. J., the negotiating committee for the CIO United Electrical Workers was empowered to call out 6000 RVA-Victor productions workers at Camden; Pulaski, Va.; Lancaster, Pa; and Hollywood, Calif. The union wants a $500 "package" of benefits including a wage hike and welfare benefits. The strike vote was taken after management's offer of a 5 cents an hour increase, either in cash or social benefits, was rejected.

Several more small plants reported shutdowns yesterday for lack of coal or steel. Another strike pinch was reported at Kanawha County, W. Va., where the school children's luncheon fund is running out. School superintendent Virgil L. Flinn said virtually all miners' children are coming to school without lunches or money to pay for them.

Federal Mediation Chief Ching met yesterday with John L. Lewis, president; Thomas Kennedy, vice president, and John Owens, secretary-treasurer of the United Mine Workers; Harry M. Moses of the "captive" mines operated by the steel industry; George H. Love of the Northern bituminous mine operators, and Joseph E. Moody of the Southern coal producers.

Gain Better Understanding

Lone tangible result of the conferences was to give Ching, and his top assistants, William M. Margolis and Peter Seitz, a better understanding of the conflict. The Government last week concentrated its attention on the 19-day coal dispute because, as Ching said, it takes coal to run the steel mills.

Ching said he'd reconvene the coal leaders next week. The conciliation director lectured both sides.

In a formal statement, Ching said: "This dispute must be settled promptly. Each day brings the Nation closer to a crisis."

State Quashes Charges In Right-to-Work Cases

Jonesville, Va., Oct. 7 (AP).—The State today quashed charges of violating the State's right-to-work law against 23 union miners involved in a fracas at St. Charles last Tuesday.

Commonwealth's Attorney Glenn Williams said he believed peace would prevail now in the Lee County mining area and "in my opinion the cases will not be revived."

The charges were an outgrowth of the Tuesday night disturbance at nearby St. Charles where a non-union coal trucker was halted and a melee resulted.

In a companion case, Everett Wolliver, a miner who police said was packing a .45 pistol when they arrested him at the scene of the St. Charles disturbance, pleaded guilty and was fined $20.

New Settlement Plan Accepted in Rail Strike

St. Louis, Oct. 7 (AP).—Both sides in the Missouri Pacific Railroad strike accepted late today a new plan designed to hasten a settlement. It was submitted by Governors and other representatives of nine affected States, after two days of confeernces.

Gov. Forrest Smith of Missouri said, "Unless some unforeseen obstacle arises, the trains should be running in a week's time."

The plan calls for the company and the unions to start negotiating immediately and dispose of all the claims they can in that manner. Then they are to attempt agreement on some way of settling the others.

If that way is found, the strike is to end.

Longshoremen Ratify Hawaii Strike Peace

Honolulu, Oct. 7 (UP).—CIO longshoremen ratified an agreement today settling the 160-day Hawaiian dock strike for a progressive wage increase reaching to 21 cents an hour by March 1.

Only minor fringe issues remained to be agreed upon before 2000 striking longshoremen, whose walkout cost the Territory of Hawaii an estimated $100,000,000, return to work.

Governor Intervenes In Ohio Gas Strike

Painesville, Ohio, Oct. 7 (AP).—Gov. Frank J. Lausche intervened today in an effort to halt a strike that has disrupted delivery of artificial gas to two counties.

Lausche asked the company and union to "meet immediately to agree on a plan of opening the coke plant."

The coke plant supplies gas to the municipal gas plant here, the Lake County Gas Co. in Ashtabula and the Lake Shore Gas Co. in Willoughby.

The plant was closed down along with other company installations Wednesday midnight when some 2250 members of District 50 of the UMW walked out.

Most homes today were reported getting along on makeshift heating apparatus. Many used hot plates, others coal or wood stoves. Most restaurants resorted to bottled gas.

Industry was not affected greatly.

HERE'S SETTING AS YANKEE PINCHITTER JOHNNY MIZE (36) HEADS TOWARD FIRST AFTER SLAMMING SINGLE AGAINST RIGHT FIELD SCREEN FOR TWO RUNS IN NINTH

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

BROOKLYN, N. Y., OCT. 7.—Down in the Brooklyn dressing room, the Dodgers were moving woodenly toward adjusting their street wear. They weren't happy about this latest defeat by the Yankees, and for the most part the comment was in sour monosyllables.

Peewee Reese was the most articulate of the gang, and reluctantly he said of the Yankees what American League teams already knew. "They're a different team with that Joe Page in there," said Reese. "Out on the field you can feel the Yanks getting a lift when Page starts to work."

POVICH

It is Page, indeed, who got the Yankees over that big hump in the fourth inning when the Dodgers tied the score at 1-1, filled the bases against Tommy Byrne with one out, and threatened to flatten the Yanks with the first big inning of the series.

He quickly got two strikes on Luis Olmo, and reduced him to a pop-foul hitter, and in a twinkling he was out of the inning. One pitch was all that Page needed to dispose of Duke Snider for the third out.

WELL IT IS THAT somebody is inspiring the Yankees, because Joe DiMaggio, their big inspirational guy since 1936, has been no help in this series. The only hit he has to his credit in three games is one infield tap, and he has hit only one pitch on the nose.

There is some suspicion now that the Dodgers in a crisis would willingly pass Yogi Berra to get at DiMaggio. Today big Joe couldn't get the ball out of the infield. Branca fanned him the first two times up, and then limited him to weak pop-ups the next two times.

DiMaggio's recent illness has slowed him up more than Yankee fans are willing to believe. His timing is sadly off, and his friends are touched at his helplessness.

Even in the field, DiMaggio has been no solid figure. He actually misjudged a ball today and only a strong wind that blew Duke Snider's fly into Leftfielder Woodling's glove saved DiMaggio from huge embarrassment.

THE MOST UNDERRATED hit of the day when it happened was Gerry Coleman's single off relief pitcher Jack Banta in the ninth that scored the Yankees' third run of the inning. With Joe Page already owning a two-run lead, and having allowed only one hit in nearly five innings of relief pitching, Coleman's contribution appeared superfluous.

But a while later the Yanks were desperately in need of that Coleman run, and it eased 'em by the Dodgers' ninth.

There was some evidence, incidentally, that Burt Shotton outfoxed himself in his choice of relief pitchers. All day he had Joe Hatten warming up, and then when he did change pitchers he called on Banta who had only lately made his appearance in the bull pen.

Casey Stengel maintained a high confidence in Page, even after those homers by Olmo and Campanella rocked him in the ninth.

THE DODGERS are now back where they were at the end of the first contest of the series, trailing the Yanks by a game. They'll need all the bounce they own to pull the series out, and for them it's no comfort that the Yankees have been winning even without help from DiMaggio. If he shakes his slump, Brooklyn might be finished off quick.

But for Dodger fans the picture is not completely black, or even very discouraging. They still have a powerful pair going for them in Don Newcombe and Preacher Roe, whom the Yanks must beat if they lick the Dodgers. And Newcombe and Roe are the two most solid pitchers in the series, despite Newcombe's defeat by Reynolds in the opener.

The Yankees will have to get another good game out of Reynolds, a famous in-and-outer, while spectacular pitching by Newcmobe is never surprising. The Dodgers would seem to have the pitching edge, except for that dratted Page, who works the late shift and is always to be reckoned with.

Packers Stop Bulldogs for 1st Win, 19-0

New York, Oct. 6 (AP).—The once-powerful Green Bay Packers notched their first victory of the season tonight when they turned back the New York Bulldogs, Eastern Division cellar-dwellers, 19-0, in a National Football League game at the Polo Grounds.

The Packers broke the ice in the first period with a field goal kicked by Ted Fritsch from the 45-yard line.

The Packers scored suddenly when Jug Girard flipped from the 13 to Nolan Luhn, in the end zone. Fritsch's kick was blocked.

In the third period Fritsch kicked another field goal, this time from the 5.

With about a minute to play Tony Canadeo climaxed a long march by dashing around end for the final touchdown from the 15. Fritsch made the extra point try good.

Grid Yankees Hand Hornets 38-24 Lacing

Chicago, Oct. 7 (AP).—Buddy Young's speed, coupled with accurate passing by Quarterback Don Panciera, enabled the New York Yankees to tighten their hold on third place in the All-America Conference by running up a 38-24 victory over the Chicago Hornets before 17,098 in Soldier Field tonight.

Dan Gardella Drops Suit

New York, Oct. 7 (U.P.).—The last threat to a constitutional setup which rules the careers of thousands of ball players was removed tonight with announcement that Mexican League jumper Danny Gardella had dropped a $300,000 damage suit against organized baseball.

But the National League took time out in the midst of the World Series to announce the action of the New Yorker, one of 18 major leaguers barred for five years in 1946 by Commissioner A. B. Chandler. That made Gardella the last to waive any court action against baseball's iron-bound reserve clause.

Previously three members of the St. Louis Cardinals—Max Lanier, Fred Martin and Lou Klein—had dropped similar suits after being reinstated by Chandler on June 5.

Fred Saigh, owner of the Cardinals, admitted that the settlement came about "through a mutual agreement."

Indianapolis Wins From Montreal, 5-4

Indianapolis, Oct. 7 (AP).—Right fielder Roy Weatherly's tenth-inning double gave the Indianapolis Indians a 5-4 victory over the Montreal Royals tonight. The triumph put the American Association team ahead again in the Little World Series, three games to two.

Ward Wins British Masters Tourney

St. Andrews, Scotland, Oct. 7 (AP).—Little Charlie Ward staged a spectacular rally today to win the British Masters golf tournament in a 36-hole playoff with Veteran John Burton.

He shot a 74-69—143 to Burton's 69-75—144. Both men finished the regulation 72 holes in 290.

Bears Sign Ed Cody

Chicago, Oct. 7 (AP).—The Chicago Bears today announced the signing of Fullback Ed Cody, captain of the 1945 Purdue team and with the Green Bay Packers for the past two years.

'Bum' Rap Didn't Get Him

Mize Was Johnny-on-the-Spot as Foghorn Boys Tried to Rattle Him in Th at Big Ninth

Brooklyn, Oct. 7 (AP).—Johnny Mize's ears were stinging with the jeers of the Brooklyn bench when he nailed that two-run single in the ninth today to blast open the third World Series baseball game.

"Hey, John, Leo's watching you—Leo's watching you," the Dodgers chanted in unison as the big Georgian waved his war club at the plate, a pinch-hitter for Cliff Mapes.

"I could hear them, too," Mize said. "Especially that Gene Hermanski. He's got a foghorn in his throat."

Mize's blast sparked a three-run inning that gave the Yankees the decision over the Dodgers, 4-3.

"I knew Durocher was there, too," big Jawn added. "I spied him sitting back of the Dodger dugout."

Durocher, as manager of the New York Giants, was Mize's boss before he moved over to the Yankees in a surprise sale August 22.

Although he long has been one of the leading home-run hitters in the game, Mize had never played in a World Series before this one.

He may become one of the series heroes. In two pinch-hit appearances, he has lashed out two important hits and is batting 1.000.

Bought for a reported $30,000 as first-base insurance in the pennant stretch, John has been little use to the Yankees.

He suffered a shoulder injury in Chicago on August 28, the same day that Tommy Henrich was "lost for the season" with a back injury. Both later got back in action.

The "Big Cat" participated in only 13 games for the Yanks and knocked out six hits in 23 trips to the plate. Among his blows were one home run and one double. He drove in only two runs, the same number he socked home with his lusty belt to right field today.

Early in the spring a rumor circulated that the Dodgers were willing to pay the Giants $200,000 for Mize but the Giants refused.

Rizzuto Just Stands Still and Ties Mark

New York, Oct. 7 (U.P.).—Shortstop Phil Rizzuto of the New York Yankees equaled a World Series record today when he just stood at his position all day and didn't get a single chance to field the ball.

The record was established by Dave Bancroft with the 1915 Philadelphia Phillies

Mr. Mize Has Last Laugh

By Whitney Martin

New York, Oct. 7 (AP).—It was just an afterthought that the big lug was in the game at all.

Maybe it was one of those inexplicable hunches that have placed the stamp of genius on Casey Stengel all year, but whatever the reason it was pure inspiration that caused him to call Cliff Mapes back from the plate in the ninth inning with the bases full and send up Johnny Mize.

The gnarled and temporarily harried skipper had glanced down the bench and sighted Johnny sitting there, healthy and strong and meaty. Mapes already was swinging his bat experimentally when the move was made that meant the ball game.

One moment Ralph Branca was clinging rather loosely to that one-to-one tie. The next moment the ball was bouncing off the rightfield screen as Large John connected for a king-sized single which, after all, was the ball game, despite the astonishing home run contest the Dodgers staged in their half of the inning.

They had laughed when the Yankees acquired the big guy last August. When the Giants

Rex Barney, Hatten Also Available

By Ted Smits

Brooklyn, Oct. 7 (AP).—Brooklyn Manager Burt Shotton has refused to name his starting pitcher for tomorrow's third game of the 1949 World Series—a game that might be the turning point with the Yankees leading, 2 games to 1.

"I haven't made up my mind yet," said Shotton. "I'll make it up tomorrow when I get out there."

There has been speculation he would send in Don Newcombe, the big Negro who lost the first game 1-0 in a brilliant pitching duel.

If he uses Newcombe tomorrow, even with only two days of rest, he would have him available for the seventh game. Newcombe is a bearcat for work.

"I'm ready to do whatever he says," Newcombe declared. "Tomorrow would be all right with me." Newcombe won 17 and lost 8 during the regular season, although he was not brought up until five weeks had elapsed.

Rex Barney (9-8) and Joe Hatten (12-8) are also available.

Shotton sadly expounded some baseball philosophy after today's game.

"When they get men on bases and they hit it up against the fence, there's gotta be runs," he said.

He referred to that all-important pitch to Johnny Mize in the ninth inning with the bases loaded.

But here's the surprise. Often baseball men claim that pitches that are hit at game turning points are mistakes, throws that got away from the pitcher, or a case of a misunderstood signal.

But not Barney Shotton.

"Ralph Branca got the ball where he wanted it, and still Mize hit it. It was a high, fast one," he said.

"If you had to throw that ball 40 times it would still be right there. Only trouble is, he hit it."

The only consolation that Shotton took in the defeat was that "it had to be a Giant to do it." The Yankees got Mize from the New York Giants of the National League, August 22.

The dressing room after the game was subdued and quiet. Even today's home run hitters—Pee Wee Reese, Roy Campanella and Luis Olmo—were unsmiling.

Reese, captain and sparkplug of the Dodgers, gave all his attention to his right ankle. He was hit there by Tommy Byrne in the first inning to get on base, only to be caught in a double play. The ankle appeared to be swelling and showed considerable redness.

Roe May Be Lost To Bums for Series

New York, Oct. 7 (U.P.).—Preacher Roe, the Arkansas southpaw who pitched Brooklyn's only victory in the World Series, said tonight that a finger injury suffered in his six-hit, second game shutout may keep him from another start in the classic.

Roe suffered a painful nail injury to the ring finger of his right hand when struck by Johnny Lindell's vicious line drive as Roe won the second game.

"I can't bend the finger," Roe said, displaying the purpled swollen digit.

Stengel Says Lopat Starts For Yankees

By Hugh Fullerton, Jr.

Brooklyn, Oct. 7 (AP).—Casey Stengel obligingly whooped: ',We had them all the way," as the Yankees trooped into their dressing room under the Ebbets Field stands after their 4-3 victory over the Dodgers in their third World Series game.

Amid the noisy hub-bub Stengel announced he will pitch Lefty Ed Vopat (15-10) tomorrow.

It took a man-sized shout to carry on a conversation and big Johnny Mize, whose ninth-inning pinch-single drove in two big runs and set up the winning run, took care of that in good style.

"I never hit 1.000 before," Mize yelled. This World Series stuff is all right. I only got six hits all season for the Yankees and now I've had two in the series."

Mize, it might be explained, played nearly 11 seasons in the National Lague without getting into a World Series. The Yanks signed him August 22.

Then, in answer to a question Mize said: "My wife didn't see it, at least not here. The Dodgers gave us seats way out in left field and she decided she could see better by staying at home by the television."

Cloudy But no Rain Predicted for Today

New York, Oct. 7 (U.P.).—The Weather Bureau predicted tonight that tomorrow's World Series game between the Dodgers and Yankees at Ebbetts Field would be played under cloudy skies but that no rain would fall.

Casey, attempting to dress hurriedly to take the team's bus back to Manhattan, brushed off questions about Joe Page's sensational relief pitching with: "He did wonderful. He was in there longer than usual, but he went as far against the Red Sox the other day."

Page, dripping with perspiration, admitted he had tired a little toward the end.

"I eased up a little, too," he added. "I took a big chance on Olmo after I had one out and eased up a little on a fast ball. He hit it for a home run. Campanella lunged at a curve for his homer. The ball was a bit slick and I was getting my fingers damp so my control wasn't so good at the end. I never use a resin bag.

Scrimmage by Redskins

MUSIC BY REDSKINS BAND

Harry Wismer, Master of Ceremonies

Football games by 90-pound and 105-pound teams of Boys Club of Washington and Police Boys Club.

No charge to you whatsoever.

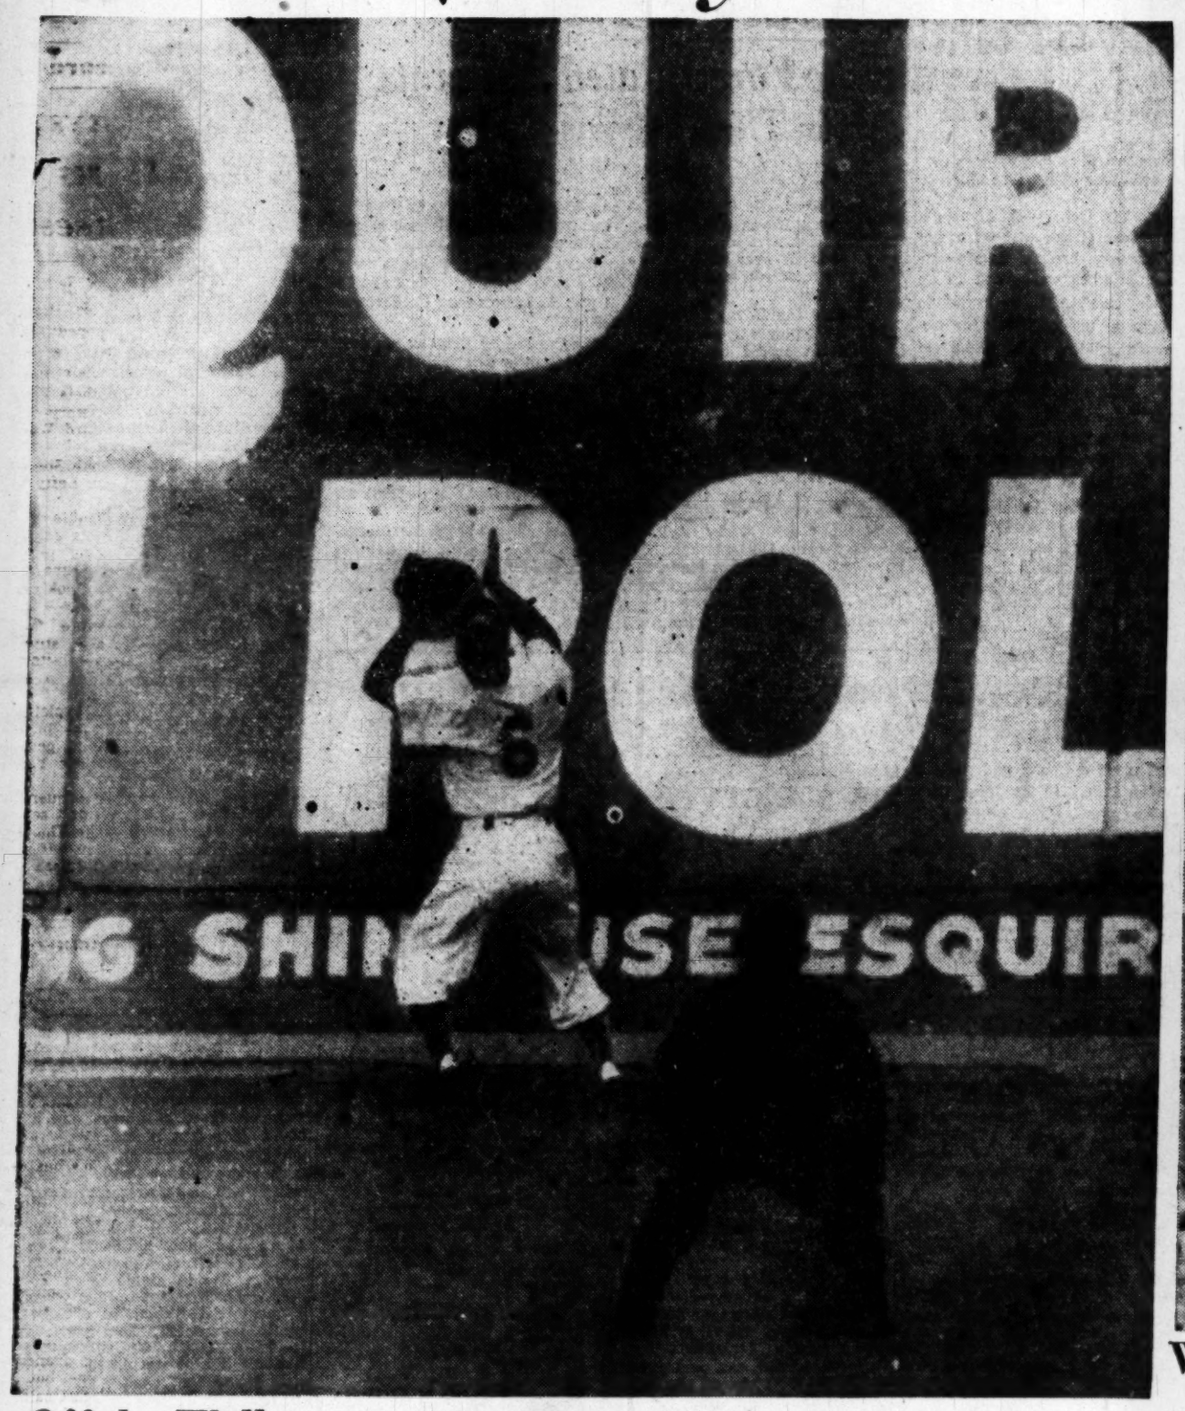
The wildfire spread of enthusiasm for the Redskin Football Clinic, sponsored by The Washington Post at Griffith Stadium on Wednesday, has reached the solemn halls of Congress, it was revealed yesterday . . . From William N. Miller, doorkeeper of the House of Representatives, came an order for 50 tickets to answer the clamoring of House pages to see the big show . . . The kids in blue will attend in a body . . . A special feature of the clinic, in case too much football is planned, will be the introduction of Washington's six most beautiful 15-year-old girls, winners of a contest staged by the Lux soap people and Station WTOP.

The attendance of Bullis Prep gridmen at Wednesday's affair, the first half of a program to be completed on Wednesday, October 19, may depend on the outcome of their clash with Staunton today . . . Coach Harry Deming says the Navy fledglings might be allowed a night off to watch the Redskins if they show well against the Cadets . . . At Herndon High, out in Fairfax County, there is an enrollment of only 185 but Coach Joe Griffiths will bring 30 players and fans to Griffith Stadium . . . Georgetown Prep's Coach Orrel Mitchell, who is also a Southern Conference official, calls the clinic "the best thing I've ever heard of. It should make every coach's job a little easier."

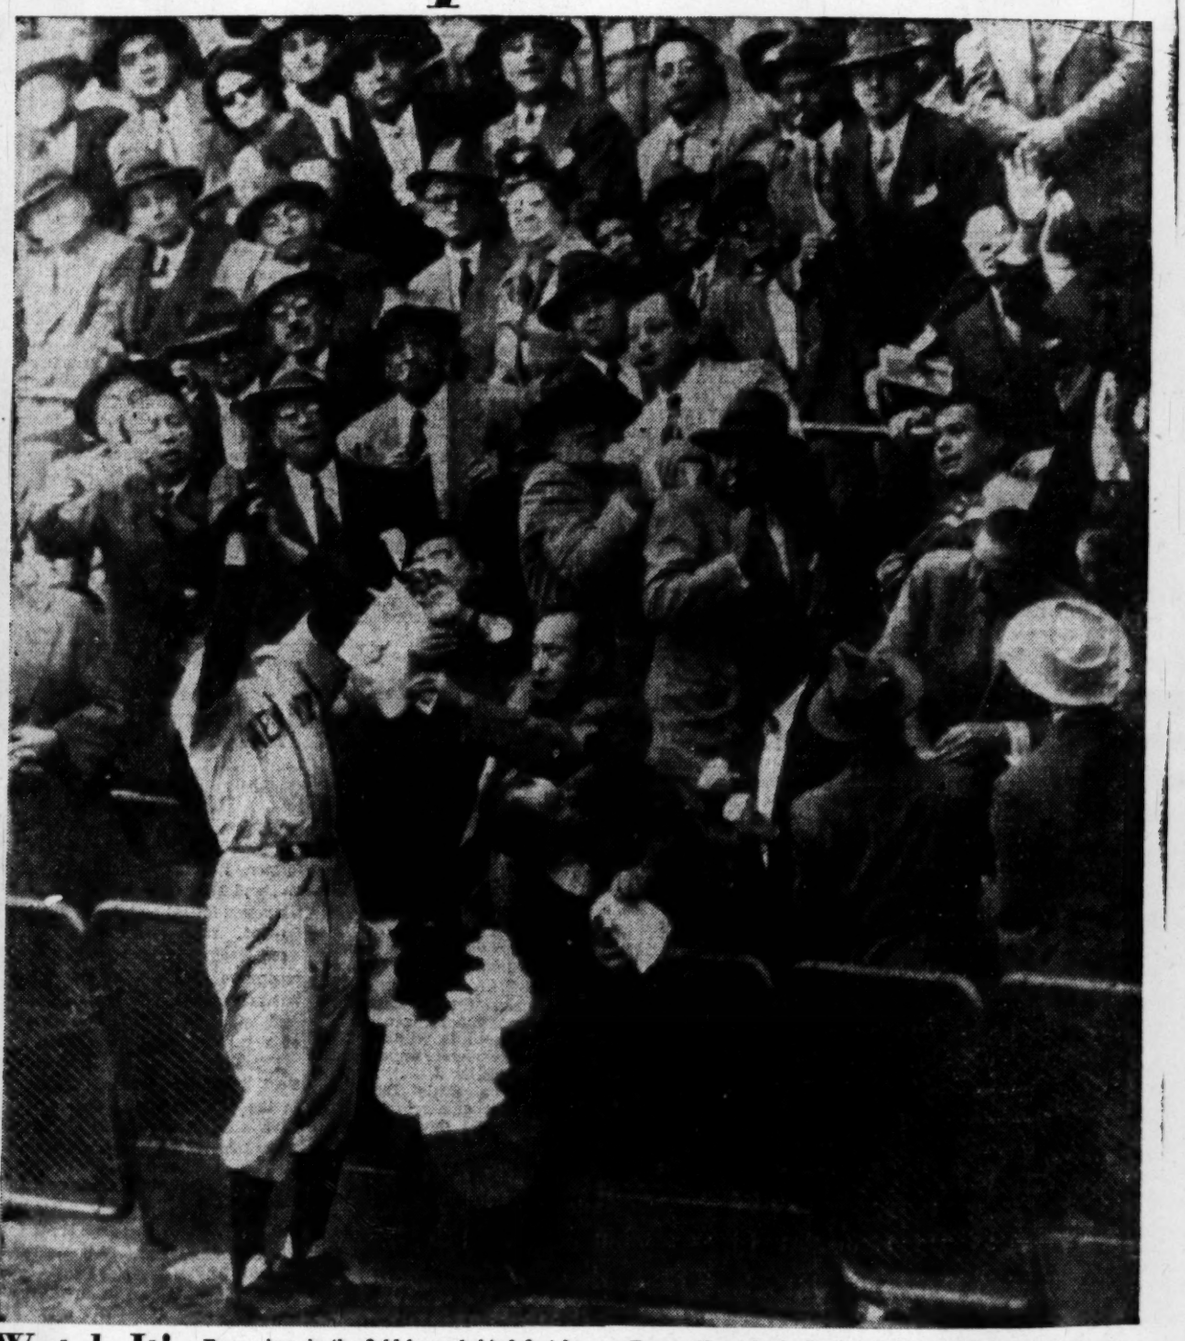
Out in Arlington they're getting together a safari that will fill a huge section at Griffith Stadium . . . The 7-Up football team of the Arlington Recreation League will bring 46 players to the clinic, and in addition there'll be such fans as a drum corps of 43 men, majorettes, eight cheer-leaders, three coaches, 25 truck drivers and five high company officials . . . A total of 7500 tickets are being distributed at the Police Boys Club, which will have 90 and 105-pound teams in action after the Redskins show how it should be done . . . Chamberlain School will send along 50 students, 75 will come from Tech, and Georgetown Prep experts 140 of its youthful grid enthusiasts to be on hand . . . Transportation is urgently needed for Arlington fans, so if you have extra space in your car or know of a truck or bus that's available, call Frank Allston at Glebe 1121 . . . He'll see that somebody uses the ride.

From Baltimore a Redskin season ticket holder, Dr. W. Buckey Clemson, has requested the same seats for Wednesday's show as he annually purchases for Sunday games here . . . Like the thousands of other fans who'll be there, Dr. Clemson wants to learn as much as he can about football from the best instructors in the game—the professionals . . . Remember: It's all free . . . Clip out the adjacent box . . . It will get you your free lesson in football.

It's a Sad Day in Bumville Despite 3 Homers



Off the Wall— This is the hit that did it. Carl Furillo, Dodgers' right-fielder, waits to catch the ball off the right-field wall after Yankee Johnny Mize, pinch-hitting in the top of the ninth, banged the single which scored two runs. The hit broke the 1-1 tie in the World Series game yesterday at Ebbets Field



Watch It!— Fans cringe in the field boxes behind first base as Tommy Henrich, the Yankees' old faithful, leans against the railing to catch the high foul hit by Brooklyn's Luis Olmo in the fourth. Bases were loaded at the time and Henrich's catch was the second out of the inning relieve Tommy Byrne in the fourth with the bases full of Dodgers, and got 'em all out. Over the next four innings, he permitted only one hit. And when Gil Hodges grounded out to start the Brooklyn ninth, Page apparently was breezing to his victory.

And then Louis Olmo jolted him with Brooklyn's second homer of the day, a line-drive smash into the tower deck of left field. Page bore down to strike out Duke Snider, but he was in distress a moment later. Roy Campanella boomed a towering homer into the same left-field sector, and Page's lead was cut to one run.

The Dodgers wheeled in Bruce Edwards as a pinch hitter, and were presenting another home-run threat. Page disposed of him neatly, getting over a called strike, bamboozling Edwards with a curve for a second strike, and two pitches later Edwards took the third strike with his bat on his shoulder. That did the Dodgers in.

There was no early evidence of the mass melancholia that was to set in, in Brooklyn. In another tight ball game of the pattern of the first two contests of the series, the Dodgers were threatening to win it. They knocked Pitcher Tommy Byrne out of the box in the fourth inning, and Branca until the Yanks' outburst in the ninth, was pitching two-hit ball.

Peewee Reese was the first of the Dodgers to knock the ball out of the lot. His smash in the fourth inning tied the game at 1-1. But on a day when the Dodgers were equallying their home run output of three previous World Series, they couldn't win.

At the finish each club could show only five hits.

Branca got a break at the start of the ninth when Jackie Robinson scampered far to his left for a one-hand pickup of Tommy Henrich's bid for a hit. But he let Yogi Berra get away on a 3-and-2 pitch and walked him, the first pass given by a Dodger in the three games.

It was Branca's first lapse after retiring 14 Yankees in succession. There was no immediate sign of a Yankee run when Joe DiMaggio, helpless and hitless all day, popped to Miksis for the second out, but Bobby Brown pumped new life int ohte Yankee rally with a single to right that moved Berra to third.

Again Branca couldn't control his 3-and-2 pitch and he walked Woodling to jam the bases. Coach Clyde Sukeforth moved to the mound for a heart-to-heart talk with Branca in this situation, and his decision was to leave the pitcher in despite the upcoming menace of pinch-hitter Mize.

Mize worked the count to 2 balls and a strike and then banged a long drive high off the screen in right. Berra and Brown raced home, and the Dodgers got a new pitcher—Jack Banta. Coleman saluted him with a single to right that scored Woodling, and gave the Yanks that precious third run of the inning.

Young Byrne, a southpaw with tendency to be wild, was in trouble at the start when he hit Peewee Reese on the leg with a pitch, but Reese himself eased the tension for Byrne. He tried to take second after Berra raced back to the screen for Miksis' pop foul, and Berra threw him out for a double play.

It was Byrne who got the first hit of the ball game, a single to center in the third with Mapes on base with a pass and one out. Phil Rizzuto fetched Mapes in from third with a fly to Furillo after vainly trying to squeeze him home.

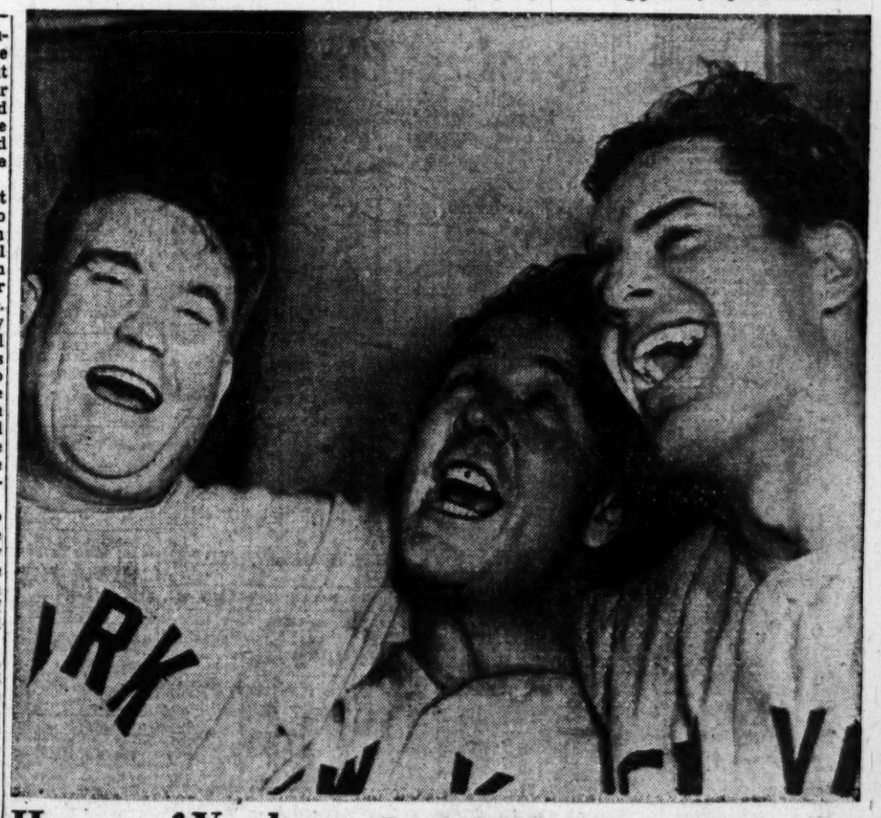
Reese got that run back quickly for the Dodgers in the fourth. All of a sudden he made Brooklyn's first hit, a wind-blown homer into the left field seats that opened the inning. Furillo singled to left with one out, and when Byrne walked Robinson and Hodges to fill the bases, Casey Stengel walked to the mound through the gloom and signaled for Page.

Page took complete charge to de-fuse that Dodgers threat. He had a bit of help from Tommy Henrich, who leaned far into the boxes behind first base to snatch Olmo's pop fly, but he got rid of Snider on a routine ground ball and was out of the inning.

From that point, until the ninth, Page was wunnerful. He didn't allow a hit of any kind until the eighth when after walking Reese with one out, he pitched a single to Miksis. Reese stopped at second and perished there with Furillo and Robinson flying out.

With a 2-1 edge the Yankees are now restored to the favorites role to take it all. Tomorrow Stengel calls on Lefty Ed Lopat and Burt Shotten as usual, is silent, but Rex Barney is expected to be his man.

'Page for Byrne'— In this drama on the mound, Yankee Catcher Yogi Berra places a reassuring hand on the shoulder of Joe Page, who has entered the game with the bases loaded in the fourth to pitch the Yankees out of a hole. Manager Casey Stengel (center) stands by as Tommy Byrne, the starting pitcher, departs the scene



Heroes of Yankees— Happy in the Yankee dressing room after yesterday's 4-3 win over the Brooklyn Dodgers in the third game of the World Series are these three New York heroes: Johnny Mize (left), whose pinch-hit single sparked the Yankees' three-run rally in the ninth; Relief Pitcher Joe Page (center), the winner, and Gerry Coleman, who drove in what proved to be the wining run

At Laurel

Dear Folks:

When I wrote that the horse Alexis always got off poorly from the No. 1 post position, I stumbled into the right answer. At least the stewards issued an order today that Alexis, who refused to break from the inside spot earlier this week, will not be permitted to run if he draws No. 1 position. Any other position is O. K. Apprentice Jockey Richard Lawless left for the Lincoln Downs (R. I.) track and plans to return to Maryland for Pimlico. There's an apprentice here named Albert Tryon. He's the son of Al Tryon, who was a familiar saddle figure a few years back. Former Jockey R. L. Vedder, who rode Alsab to victory in some of his important races, still works horses for the Sabath stable, many of them sons and daughters of Alsab. Good weekend show. BILL

Hobie B. Beaten By Two Lengths

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Laurel Md., Oct. 7.—Two-year-olds vied today in the split feature event. After much splashing through a sloppy track, C. B. Fischback's Miss Gee-Du won the first division and W. T. Leatherbury's Bengal Trail won the second division.

The sexes broke even. Miss Gee-Du, a filly by Ocean Wave, won by two lengths over W. Y. Goldsborough's Hobie B., and Flamingo Farm's Darling Man. Bengal Trail, a colt by Tiger, won by three lengths from D. A. Rosenbaum's My Dividend and A. J. Crevolin's Miss Clippette.

Miss Gee-Du, ridden by Apprentice Dick Stark, was second choice in the betting and paid $10.60 after going the 6 furlongs in 1:14 2/5. Bengal Trail, ridden by Jockey James Lynch, was the favorite and paid $3.60 after going the route in 1:14 1/5.

Although the weather overhead was ideal for the sport, the morning rains held down the attendance to slightly over the 6000 mark.

The daily double on the 4 and 3 combination paid $74. A. S. Garthwright's Flamare won the first race under Apprentice William Curtin's handling and paid $18.40. Apprentice John Regalbuto booted E. Constantin, jr.'s Paramount home in the second event, the filly paying $8.60.

Sky Miracle Tops Field In Maryland 'Cap Today

Laurel, Md., Oct. 7.—One of the newer stars of the 3-year-old division, Burton B. Chait's Sky Miracle, heads a field of five well-matched performers scheduled to furnish the thirty-fifth running of the mile and a quarter Maryland Handicap at Laurel tomorrow.

The $10,000 number, limited to "sophomores," probably will find Sky Miracle a strong favorite in view of his recent good performances over the New York ovals and he'll be top weight under 117 pounds.

Arrayed against the invader from the metropolitan circuit will be King Ranch's Swap Out, 115, C. E. Tuttle's Double Brandy, 113, Edward Werber's Vamanos, 109, and S. W. Labrot's Taran, 107.

Mr. Mize Has Last Laugh

were willing to let him go, the wise guys said, he was through, and what would a first-place club like the Yankees do with him?

He was slow afoot, and would be a liability at first base. For every home run he hit he'd hit into five double plays. He had no more fire than a pack of wet matches.

Well, he never did get much of a chance to prove his critics were wrong. He hurt his shoulder soon after joining the club, and sat dismally on the bench, a rather expensive piece of freight.

He never had much of a chance until yesterday, that is, when he went to bat as a pinch-hitter in his first World Series and delivered a single. With that hit he earned his salary.

It was another bad day for the still wobbly Joe DiMaggio, but there was only sympathy when he struck out the first two times up and popped out feebly the next two.

There is something so majestic about the guy when he gets up there that even his strike-outs have the touch of class, and Dodger fans were mute at his failures, recognizing that a great ball player was swallowing his pride in even appearing in the lineup in his condition.

Roller Derby Opens Tonight Between Area, Jersey Teams

The Roller Derby rolls into Washington tonight.

Nationally known stars will represent the Washington-Baltimore Wildcats and New Jersey Jolters as competition opens at Uline Arena at 8:30 o'clock.

The derby ends October 30.

The Jersey Jolters arrived here yesterday while the Wildcats are to check in this morning after having completed a nine-game stand against the organized Brooklyn Bombers in Brooklyn's 14th Regiment Armory last night.

Carl "Big Moose" Payne, powerful former blocking defenseman of the world champion New York Flashes, will be player-coach of the Jolters and "Wild Bill" Reynolds, originally with the Brooklyn Bombers, pilots Washington-Baltimore.

The Wildcats' teams, men's and women's, will be captained by the husband-wife combination of Bob Lewis and Georgeanna Kemp. John Karp and Mary Youpelle will captain the Jolters.

The Roller Derby combines football, ice hockey and six-day bike racing.

Seven former Bronx-Philadelphia stars who are to represent Washington-Baltimore are: Ted Greig, Betty Knock, Gus Gabrovic, Alice Brother, Bob Lewis, Georgeanna Kemp and Conrad Radcliffe Reynolds, Edith Branum, Helen Licursi, Mary Gardner and Jack Wilson are former Brooklyn aces affiliated with the Wildcats who also have three former Chicago players, Buddy Kemp, Dorothy Hall and Frank Witt.

Payne and his wife, Monta Jean, will lead eight former champion New York Flashes into action for Jersey. The other are Buddy Collins, Renee Randle, Capt. John Carp, Hugh Greenwood, Don Lewis and Jean Porter.

Howard Faces Virginia Union

Howard University's injury-riddled Bisons will limp to Richmond, Va., to tackle the scrappy Virginia Union Panthers tonight at Hovey Field.

The Bisons must win over the twice-beaten Panthers to remain in the CIAA title race. But their chance for victory has dropped with the loss of Guard Otto Jordan, all-CIAA choice in 1947-48 and Charles "Chuck" Ross, versatile T-formation signal-caller.

Also injured is William "Bill" Brown, 200-pound senior tackle from Newark, N. J.

Diminutive Ernie Davis will handle the quarterback chores along with Hal Davison who formerly quarterbacked for Fort Bragg's Eighty-second Division.

Coach Eddie Jackson has a smooth triple-threat quarterback in Larry Carter who does most of the Bison punting and toward the end of the 1948 season blossomed into an uncanny passer.

In spite of their showing against the Yellow Jackets, the Bisons still remain favorites to top the Panthers because of their depth in reserves.

Navy 6-Point Underdog in Duke Game

Annapolis, Oct. 7.—Although their 2-year streak without a victory has been broken, Navy's surprising Middies were back in an underdog role tonight as they made last-minute preparations for tomorrow's clash with Duke at Thompson Stadium.

The Middies were expected to lose by one touchdown in their first Annapolis appearance since 1947. Coach George Sauer apparently thought the rating was about right.

"We have to be a lot smoother to win," he said today as he sent his squad through a lengthy offensive drill. "We look only fair."

A single shift in the crew which worked over Princeton last week was planned. If Halfback Billy Powers' ankle is not sufficiently healed, his place will be taken by either Bill Weaver or Duff Arnold.

From Durham, N. C. came word that Duke's defenses had suffered with an injury to Zee Sherrill, a regular guard. Two other Duke standbys, wingbacks Jack Friedlund and Fred Shoonmaker, are doubtful starters.

Probable line-ups:

Duke			Navy
Youmans	L.E.		Andresen
Allen	L.T.		Tetreault
Knotts	L.G.		Wagner
Gibson	Center		Gambke
James	R.G.		Harvey
Reese	R.T.		Hunt

Virginia Faces VPI at Roanoke

Charlottesville, Oct. 7.—The offensive-minded Cavaliers of the University of Virginia take the field tomorrow at 2:30 against Virginia Tech in Roanoke's Victory Stadium.

Their hopes of, course, center on Johnny Papit, who has risen to second place in the national ground-gaining department. The rapid fullback's two-game collection of 399 yards against George Washington and Miami, about equally distributed, is topped only by Drake's Bright, who has romped 58 yards more in three games.

Mrs. Glick's 235 Wins Golf

Baltimore, Oct. 7 (AP).—Mrs. Maurice Glick of Baltimore's Woodholme Country Club fired a two over women's par 77 today to win the Payne Trophy Golf tournament at the Rolling Road course by a 10-stroke margin. Her total for the 54-hole, three-day meet was 235.

Second was Mary Ann Downey of the Baltimore Country Club with 245. After whipping through with a 76 yesterday, Miss Downey faltered today over the slow, Soggy course to an 81. She slid to an 88 the first round.

Today's results (gross, handicap, net, three-day net):

Mrs. Maurice Glick, Woodholme, 77—1—76, 232; Mary Ann Downey, Baltimore County Club, 81—2—79, 239; Helen Ruff, Rolling Road, 93—10—83, 240; Mrs. James Duke, Bonnie View, 89—9—80, 243; Betty Carter, Argyle, 87—4—83, 247; Mrs. J. Deacons Big Favorite

Wake Forest Rated 21 Points Better Than Hoyas Today

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

Wake Forest, N. C., Oct. 7.—Georgetown's Hoyas took a deep practice breath here today, preparing to step in over their heads once again tomorrow against Wake Forest's Deacons.

This time the Hoyas are slated to lose by 21 points by people who deal in that sordid odds-making business. In two previous starts, Bob Margarita's lads have been only two-touchdown underdogs, Holy Cross remembers it well.

All week, colorful Peahead Walker and his aides have been trying to tell their boys Georgetown may be tougher than they think. Line coach Tom Rogers and backfield coach Bobby Kellogg, former Tulane All-American, both have scouted the Hoyas twice.

Unfortunately for Georgetown, Wake Forest has lost two tough ones in a row—13-7 games to SMU and Boston College. Feeling is that the Deacons will take it out on the poor, little Hoyas.

Wake Forest, you know, was rated close behind North Carolina in preseason Southern Conference ratings.

They're led by Bill Gregus, Bill (Nub) Smith, Bill Miller, Dickie Davis, Carroll Blackerby and Bobby Stutts. They figure to do some fancy roaming tomorrow.

As ever, Margarita is cool and collected. "We had one fine practice this week," Margarita said, "if we can regain that edge, I think we can win."

This could be a break for Georgetown. Wake Forest next plays North Carolina, arch neighborhood rival. The Deacons might be looking right past the team Maryland routed, 33-7.

Kansas Choice As G. W. Seeks 1st Victory

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

Lawrence, Kans., Oct. 7.—By air, George Washington's Colonials arrived here this afternoon. By air tomorrow afternoon, they will seek to gain their first win of the season at the expense of Kansas' Jayhawkers.

The Colonials and Jayhawkers have a lot of things in common. Principally, neither team has won a game. Both have come close. For this one Kansas is a 14-point favorite.

Kansas was drubbed, 28-0, by Texas Christian in its opener, was nosed out, 13-12, by Colorado, and last week took a 19-6 licking from Iowa State.

On successive weeks, G. W. has lost to Virginia, 27-13, and to V. M. I., 14-7.

Again, G. W.'s hopes rest on Handy Andy Davis, whose total offense shows more than 400 yards gained already. Of G. W.'s three touchdowns so far, Davis passed for one, scored one, and carried G. W. to the opponents one before letting Al DuGoff take the ball over.

This is the sixth meeting of the two intersectional rivals since 1933. G. W. has three wins, and Kansas two.

Bowie-Bogart Teams All Even After 23 Holes

Buddie Bowie and his nephew, Phil Bowie, surprised by carrying Ralph Bogart and Dr. James Dushbabek, 23 holes before the match was halted by darkness, still all even, in the Columbia Country Club Invitation tourney yesterday.

The match will be continued today and will be followed by two semifinal matches. Bill Shannon and Leroy Anderson meet the winner of the Bowie-Bowie, Bogart-Dushbabek match. Shannon and Anderson defeated Dick Mahar and Charlie Price, 1 up, to gain the semifinals.

The other semifinal match pairs Clarence Dodge, jr., and Merle Thorpe, who edged Frank Weller and Douglass Barry, 2 up, against Richie Edmondson and M. Parker Nolan. Edmondson and Nolan eliminated Walter Gallagher and Bobby Brownell, 1 up, in another upset.

Mrs. Bailey, Halser Win Best Ball Tourney

Mrs. George Bailey and Mrs. Samuel Halser combined their talents to win the best ball ladies' day tournament at Washington Country Club, with an 86-22—64.

Second place went to Mrs. A. T. Dinneen and Mrs. J. C. Schsitzer, 93-23—70. Mrs. Charles Egenroad and Mrs. A. S. Ferry, 88-15—72, took third.

Anacostia Ties Central's Champs, 13-13; Wilson Upsets Eastern, 34-13

Bob Chatlin Scores After Teams Fight

By Jules Loh

Bob Chatlin sprinted 30 yards for a touchdown in the last three minutes to enable Anacostia to tie Central's Interhigh champs, 13-13, yesterday at Central.

The touchdown run and the perfect placement by Bill Neal that provided the all-important point was delayed by a bitter outburst of fighting.

A spectator started it on the sideline and the players took it up in a wild melee on the field. Subs on both benches stood up but were restrained from joining the fray.

Order finally was restored and five or six players were ejected.

Chatlin's scoring sprint marked the second time Anacostia came from behind to tie the favored Central club, handicapped by the injury of Jimmy Pantos.

Pantos, Central's all-everything back, was in for only four plays, picking up 75 yards. But the shoulder he sprained in last week's Roosevelt's game couldn't take any more punishment.

Anacostia was helpless in the first half, able to advance only once beyond midfield. Meanwhile, Central took an early 6-0 lead on a 17-yard pass from Jim Sullivan to Terry Gregory after a 48-yard drive.

Chatlin, Anacostia's hero, had a prominent part in the first score, too. Chatlin took the second half kickoff 36-yard to spark a 95-yard march culminated by a plunge from the one by Big Ed (Alabama) Burt.

Central struck back on the first play of the final quarter, with Quarterback Jim Sullivan going around end for six yards. Lynn Leathery kicked the point.

By West McLean

McKinley Tech's Trainers scored in every period to romp to a 26-0 win over the Coolidge Colts yesterday at Roosevelt Stadium as Ray Fox tallied three times for the Trainers.

Benny Colandero took a Coolidge punt on his own 36 and returned it to the Colts' 38 to set up the first score. Fox plunged over from the 6, four plays later. Maurice Collins' placement was blocked.

Fox climaxed an 83-yard drive in the second period when he went over left guard for the score from 1-yard out. Collins' conversion was perfect.

Fox tallied again half way in the third quarter, this time on a four-yard smash over right tackle. Collins added his second point after touchdown.

Chamberlain Loses, 26-0, To Western

By Murray Schwartz

Tallying two touchdowns and a safety in the first period, highly-favored Western rolled on to a 26-0 Interhigh victory over Chamberlain yesterday on the winners' field.

Paul Weinstein, 135-pounder, threaded his way through the center of the line for a 17-yard scoring plunge to get Western started. Shortly thereafter, Dale Larsen returned a Mickey Curtis punt 47 yards for the second score.

Western Guard Jay Stewart interrupted the backs' parade when he blocked a Curtis punt in the end zone and it rolled out for a safety.

Ted Dayharsh took a pass from Weinstein for a 32-yard scoring play in the second period. Dick Casey wounded up the point-making in the third quarter on a two-yard plunge. Dayharsh set it up by intercepting a pass by Joe Kolley on the Chamberlain 30.

Speros Runs 59 Yards, Scores 3

By Don Lief

Led by Leo Speros' three first-half touchdowns, Woodrow Wilson yesterday upset Eastern High, 34-13, at Eastern before an estimated 1800.

Speros scored early in the game on a quick-opening play from the Eastern 36. Two complete passes from Leo to Tom Sandoz and Lee Brinson later brought the ball down to the Rambler one where Speros plunged for his second tally.

Aided by some good downfield blocking, Speros got away for a 59-yard score late in the half. Dick Sebastian made good on all three extra points.

Eastern's first touchdown resulted from a partly blocked Tiger punt that was downed on the 34. Danny Cookman passed to Des McLearen on the 6. Then the same combination clicked for a touchdown from the 4.

Eastern outplayed Wilson statistically in the third period but neither team scored until midway in the last quarter. Tom Sandoz intercepted a Cookman pass and ran 39 yards to the Rambler 9. Stopped by the line, Speros tossed to End Pete Haley for Wilson's fourth score.

Passes led to each team's final score: Chris King flipped to Sandoz who lateraled to Brinson for a Wilson 23-yard play. Bob Martino intercepted one of Sandoz' passes and raced 30 yards for Eastern with one minute to play.

"LET ME OUT OF HERE"—Ed Burt, the player with his puss pushed askew, finds himself in a heck of a situation in yesterday's Central-Anacostia Interhigh football game. But Burt scored a touchdown for Anacostia on this particular play on a 1-yard plunge, despite the efforts of Central's George Cozzens (41) and Jerry Murphy (extreme right) to stop him. Arrow denotes ball in Burt's grasp. Central and Anacostia tied, 13-13

Landon Bows To St. James

By Harrison Hagemeyer

Stocky little Vince Milano scored all three of his team's touchdowns as St. James downed Landon, 19 to 12, yesterday at Landon's Field in Bethesda.

Milano made touchdown runs of 53 and 24 yards and scored on a 38-yard pass from Tom Cassell.

Landon scored first as the second quarter began, recovering a fumble on St. James' 12. Lanny Banfield passed to Bill Gess for the touchdown.

St. James came right back, scoring twice before the half ended with Milano's 24-yard run over left tackle and Cassell's 38-yard pass.

Milano scored in the fourth quarter after Bob Fowler intercepted a Landon pass on his own 47. Milano took the handoff and threaded his way through the entire Landon team to the goal line 53 yards away. Cassell made the extra point.

Landon scored its last touchdown in the fourth quarter on a pass, from Banfield to Bill Coupland.

Conference Agreement On Executive Pay Hike Bill Expected Monday

Substantial agreement was reached yesterday on the top-flight pay raise bill by the 10 Senate-House conferees.

Another meeting will be held at 10 a. m. Monday, at which time a final report on the embattled bill is expected to be written. Approval of the executive bill will clear the way for quick action on the classified pay-reclassification. It is hoped to have a conference Monday afternoon on it.

The tentative report of the conferees on the top-flight bill follows along the lines of a compromise plan suggested to them by the President several days ago at a White House session. The fact is that several of the conferees had similar plans in mind.

Under it, Cabinet members would get $22,500; undersecretaries, $18,000; assistant secretaries, $15,000, with $16,000 and $14,000 salary levels for other officials.

Congress hopes to adjourn a week from today. There is the minimum of time for conferences, agreements, and action by both the Senate and the House. The executive bill must be agreed to before any action is taken on the classified and postal measures. That is why it is so important.

GAO: Grade demotions for 225 employes in the audit division of the General Accounting Office will go into effect on October 30.

Most of the employes are being bumped two grades; some three grades, others a single grade. In addition, this is the second round of downgrading for some of these unhappy people.

Regular employes who have been ordered demoted to CAF-2 will be given a chance for Grade 3 jobs. They will displace war service and temporary Grade 3 clerks who have been ordered laid off by Civil Service.

Downgraded employes have been invited to go to the GAO personnel office to discuss the factors involved in their demotions. They have also been advised of their appeal rights. No layoff is involved at this time. Because of reduced activity, GAO has gone down from 15,000 employes in 1946 to fewer than 9000.

NOTES: AFL's American Federation of Government Employes is supporting Leland Olds for confirmation for a new five-year term on the Federal Power Commission . . . Dr. F. L. Other speakers will be Thomas J. Hitch, J. L. Kelly, Robert Hubbell and A. J. Keenan . . . Henry F. Hubbard of the Federal Personnel Council will discuss better selection methods at a Society for Personnel Administration meeting at 7:30 p. m. the same evening in the Archives Auditorium.

REVENUE: The Albert Gallatin Award for outstanding service was given to these Internal Revenue employes on their retirement: Effie T. Brodnax, William W. Conners, Charles F. Fincher, Berniece V. Gibson, Helen F. Hill and Mary C. Jones.

LETTER: "The Federal workers who do not take sick leave are the ones who cause others to have to take it. Bond Issue Urged for Five-Year Water Plan

Budget Request Sees Loan Needed If the Supply Is To Meet Demand

The District should shelve a "pay-as-you-go" policy on its water facilities and borrow cash for a start on a five-year, 15-million-dollar expansion program if the water supply is to meet demand, Washington Aqueduct officials warned last night.

The recommendation was contained in the combined Water Department Aqueduct budget request of $7,973,000 for the fiscal year 1951.

Acting Engineer Commissioner L. E. Cox said the $1,283,000 requested by Aqueduct officials above the amount available for capital outlay in the water fund could be financed by issuance of bonds or, preferably, by a loan from the Federal Treasury without interest.

Since the Aqueduct supplies water for nearby Maryland and Virginia, in addition to Washington and the many Federal facilities here, its needs could probably be considered for a Federal grant, Colonel Cox pointed out.

31 Percent Above "Rated" Load

Aqueduct officials noted that on July 29, more than 241 million gallons of water were supplied—31 percent above the rated capacity of the facilities. In a period in June, the daily delivery was 209 million gallons or 13 percent above capacity.

"Continued operation on an overload basis involves hazards to the safety and adequacy of the water supply," the budget request declared. "Hotter and more protracted dry spells are a distinct possibility," too, it was noted.

The request noted that the borrowing would be well secured by anticipated revenues during the next 25 to 30 years, but the improvements could not wait. The requested improvements included:

Begin construction of the Dalecarlia Pumping Station and connecting pipe lines—$1,300,000 as the first leg on a four-million-dollar project.

Begin construction of a 30-million-gallon clear-water basin and connecting conduits at Dalecarlia—one million dollars as a start on a $2,600,000 program.

New Chemical Building

Erect a new chemical building and operating center at McMillan Filter Plant—$200,000 toward a $370,000 structure.

Deepen Little Falls Creek drainage channel—$60,000.

Miscellaneous improvements—$350,000.

The Aqueduct is operated by the Army Engineers with the District contributing to the cost. The budget request asks authority to permit transfer of funds between the District Water Division and the Aqueduct as needs in either division arise. The transfers are subject to the approval of the Secretary of the Army and the District Commissioners.

The city water department asked for a budget of $3,436,000, of which $350,000 is for construction of trunk mains in new territories or congested areas; $150,000 for installation of additional pumping facilities at the Anacostia Pumping Station, and $100,000 for completion of rehabilitation of the Bryant st. pumping station.

Port Terminus for West Indies Vessels Aim of $75,000 River Dredging Project

The Washington Post

ON THE CAPTAIN'S BRIDGE—Col. Henry C. Wolfe (left), the United States District Engineer for the District area, points out a river site to Louis F. Bohraus, chairman of the Board of Trade's rivers and harbor committee

Washington may become a port for cruise vessels from Bermuda and other West Indies points by next spring, it was disclosed yesterday.

Dredging of the Potomac River channel to authorized depth near Maryland Point below Occoquan will probably get under way within a few weeks, according to Colonel Henry C. Wolfe, District Engineer.

When the project is completed, the channel will be 24 feet deep from the mouth of the Potomac to Washington, Colonel Wolfe said. At present, shoals confine the depth to 21 feet between Maryland and Smith Points.

Seeks Cruise Terminus

Louis F. Bohraus, chairman of the river and harbor committee of the Washington Board of Trade, said yesterday that Ocean Cruise Services, Inc., would like to establish Washington as a terminus for regular West Indian and Caribbean cruises in the 10,000-ton steamship, Evangeline.

Completion of the dredging project, expected to cost about $75,000, should permit such a ship to enter Washington, Colonel Wolfe said.

The board believes that heavy draft Navy vessels and freighters transporting newsprint also would increase river commerce with the improved channel.

Colonel Wolfe explained the project after a harbor inspection tour sponsored yesterday by the river and harbor committee of the Board of Trade.

About 75 members of the board and persons interested in waterfront improvements cruised up and down the Potomac for 3 hours aboard the Navy tug Heekon. It was the first such trip since September, 1946.

Most of Colonel Wolfe's comments during yesterday's cruise were devoted to proposed improvements under study by the Washington District of the Corps of Engineers.

The survey, which will probably take two more years to finish, is now well under way with a recent appropriation of about $50,000, Colonel Wolfe said. Twice that much may be needed for its completion, he said.

One of the projects he pointed out was Pier 4 on the north side of Washington Channel between 6th and 7th sts. sw., for which House and Senate conferees approved $375,000 this week.

About $500,000 already has been spent on foundation work for the pier. Original estimates were that more than $600,000 more will be needed to complete the job.

Gas Station Safe Hammerer Draws 3 Detectives to Scene

As a safe cracker, Luther Johnson makes a fine bass drummer. At least that is the police viewpoint.

Luther, who is 27 and lives at 446 R st. nw., was arrested at about 4 a. m. yesterday at a filling station at New Jersey and Rhode Island aves. nw.

Police charged Luther with housebreaking and said he was trying to break into a safe in the filling station.

Now, usually, safe crackers are quiet men. But the way police tell it, Luther was the noisiest man in town. When three vice squad detectives, Pvts. Herbert Taylor and Paul L. Gaines and Precinct Detective E. L. Cooper, cruised by the station their ears were smitten by sounds as though the National Symphony was hitting the Anvil Chorus.

The detectives said they investigated and found Luther hammering mightily on a safe in the filling station. They told him to stop the noise. They also arrested him.

Police said it was strictly the job of an amateur. The dial of the safe had been knocked off, but that was all. However, a soft drink machine and a candy dispenser had been broken open.

Last February, Luther was sentenced to 180 days for illegal entry.

Prisoner Flees Jail At Fairfax

Police of Virginia, Maryland, D. C. Hunt Man Facing Trial on Monday

Virginia, District and Maryland authorities were searching last night for a man indicted as an auto thief whose escape from the Fairfax County jail was discovered at 6:30 p. m.

He is Ray Longerbeam, 25, of Clifton, Va., in Fairfax County, who was to go on trial Monday morning on the theft charge.

Sheriff John E. Taylor said Longerbeam was with seven other prisoners in a cell block located in the center of a wing of the jail. The cell block is surrounded by a corridor, which in turn is surrounded by the outside walls of the building.

During the day, Sheriff Taylor said, the cells are unlocked, and the men are permitted to walk in the corridor for exercise.

At 7 p. m. Thursday, he said, Deputy Sheriff Weymer Lee enterer the wing to lock the men in cells for the night. After locking them in, Taylor said, Lee made a bed check, and thought that all inmates were locked up.

Yesterday morning, another jailer discovered Longerbeam was not in his cell, but that a bundle of clothing had been wadded up under bedding to make it appear he was there and asleep, Taylor said.

He said Longerbeam apparently had circled the corridor, keeping the cellblock between himself and Lee. When Lee was turning off a shower bath in a far corner of the wing, Taylor said, Longerbeam apparently went through the outside door. No other bars were between him and freedom.

The missing man was described as white, 5 feet 11 inches tall, 150 pounds, dark brown hair and hazel eyes. Taylor said he has a previous police record for auto thefts.

Welfare Rolls In the District Getting Longer

Washington's welfare rolls are getting longer, and the end isn't in sight.

This trend, reported earlier in the Public Welfare Board's budget, was borne out yesterday when the department increased requests for service in every category of public assistance.

The increases came in August when the department had a 22.8 percent increase in one-person cases receiving public assistance compared with August, 1948, and an 8.9 percent increase in persons in families receiving assistance.

Increases in other categories were: Old-age assistance, 7.4 percent; families asking aid for dependent children, 25.6 percent; aid for the blind, 17.1 percent.

During August the Welfare Department admitted 15 persons to the Industrial Home School (Colored) at Blue Plains, 10 to the Industrial Home School on Wisconsin avenue, 44 to the Industrial Home School Annex, 7 to the National Training School for Boys, 2 to the National Training School for Girls, and 150 to the Receiving Home for Children.

Admissions in each category represented an increase over the same period in 1948.

Before Court

Moore Child Prefers D. C. To Farm

Eleven-year-old John A. Moore, jr., testified in District Court yesterday that he would rather live in Washington than on his father's Mount Airy, Md., farm.

John and his 7-year-old brother, James, are the central figures in a custody fight that has been waged in the courts intermittently for several years by the divorced parents.

At this time, the father has legal custody but the mother, Mrs. Rose B. Moore, 40, of 766 Princeton pl. nw., is seeking to get the children from him.

Little John, in testifying before Judge F. Dickinson Letts, said he felt that being in Washington, where he is near parochial schools, such as Sacred Heart, which he had attended, is preferable to farm life and the public schools.

He said he and his brother awakened early on the farm, and brought in the cattle for milking. After the mile-home walk from the school bus, he said, there were other chores.

He called Moore's second wife "Dorothy" and said that when she first saw him in the morning, she might say "Your father wants you to feed the pigs," instead of "Good morning." He added that she seemed to prefer her own four children to himself and James.

The case will resume on Monday.

Crime Probe Is Welcomed By Young

District Commissioner John Russell Young yesterday voiced a hearty welcome for the approaching House investigation of crime and law enforcement in Washington.

The investigation would be authorized by a House resolution which has cleared the Rules Committee, and for which House approval is expected early next week. The probe is to be headed by Representative James C. Davis (D., Ga.), of the House District Committee.

Young said he welcomes the proposed inquiry as "an opportunity to focus public attention on the fine record of the Metropolitan Police Department."

Among Young's duties is the general supervision of the police department, whose commanding officer is Maj. Robert J. Barrett, superintendent. Barrett had previously voiced a similar welcome for the investigation.

Young said that within recent weeks he had discussed with Major Barrett the annual report of the police department, for the fiscal year ending last June 30, and had praised him for the fine results it showed in clearing up serious cases.

Davis had pointed out his forthcoming inquiry will cover activities of the police, the courts, the prosecuting attorney's office and the probation office.

Court Voids Evidence in Newsstand Gaming Raid

Warrant Issued 76 Days After Alleged Offense Ruled Defective

Gambling evidence seized in the March 25 raid on Barber's newsstand, 427 10th st. nw., was taken on a defective warrant, Judge Edward A. Tamm ruled yesterday in District Court.

Judge Tamm said the search warrant was deficient because the lapse of 76 days between the date of the alleged gambling offense and the issuance of the search warrant was too long. Search of the newsstand incident to the arrest of three men there was also illegal, Judge Tamm said, because Government officials "had ample time to secure a proper search warrant."

As a result of the ruling, racing forms, tally sheets, scratch pads, a dice table cover and "certain moneys" will be inadmissible in the upcoming trial of John L. Quinn, 41, of the Harrington Hotel; his brother, William Quinn, 28, 1018 South Carolina ave. se., and Thomas B. White, 1104 N. Quincy st., Arlington, Va., on charges of setting up a gaming table, conspiracy and bookmaking.

They are three of 36 men arrested as a result of a series of simultaneous raids staged on March 25 by U. S. Attorney George Morris Fay. Garner S. Barbour, newsstand proprietor, also arrested in the raid, died of a heart attack five weeks later.

The search warrant for Barber's Newstand was issued on the basis of an affidavit signed March 24 by Undercover Agent Wilfred J. Barrett, 22-year-old law student, according to court testimony. Barrett charged that he had made horse race bets at the newstand as late as January 7, 1949. Judge Tamm ruled that the lapse between January 7 and March 24 was "too long to constitute probable cause for issuing the warrant."

But in a separate ruling, Judge Tamm said that the same affidavit, backed by a supporting affidavit from a telephone company employe, did constitute probable cause for the issuance of a search warrant for State Wide Sports News Distributors, Inc., 3701 Bladensburg rd., Colmar Manor, Md., also raided by Fay agents on March 25.

As a result of this ruling, evidence seized at State Wide will be admissible in the Government's case against Murray H. Olf of the Bladensburg rd. address, William S. Doyle, 1956 Biltmore st. nw.; Sidney Frischer, 2225 N st. nw.; William Cohen, 1667 Good Hope rd. se., and Lee Thomas Lewis, 3612 39th ave., Colmar Manor, arrested at State Wide and charged with the Quinns and White with conspiracy, setting up a gaming table and bookmaking.

Seized evidence includes more than $18,000 worth of checks made out by Olf to Sam Beard, self-styled kingpin of District gambling; 100 sets of dice, 120 K books, or numbers slips, two nonstandard telephones and other gambling paraphernalia.

Phone Number Identified

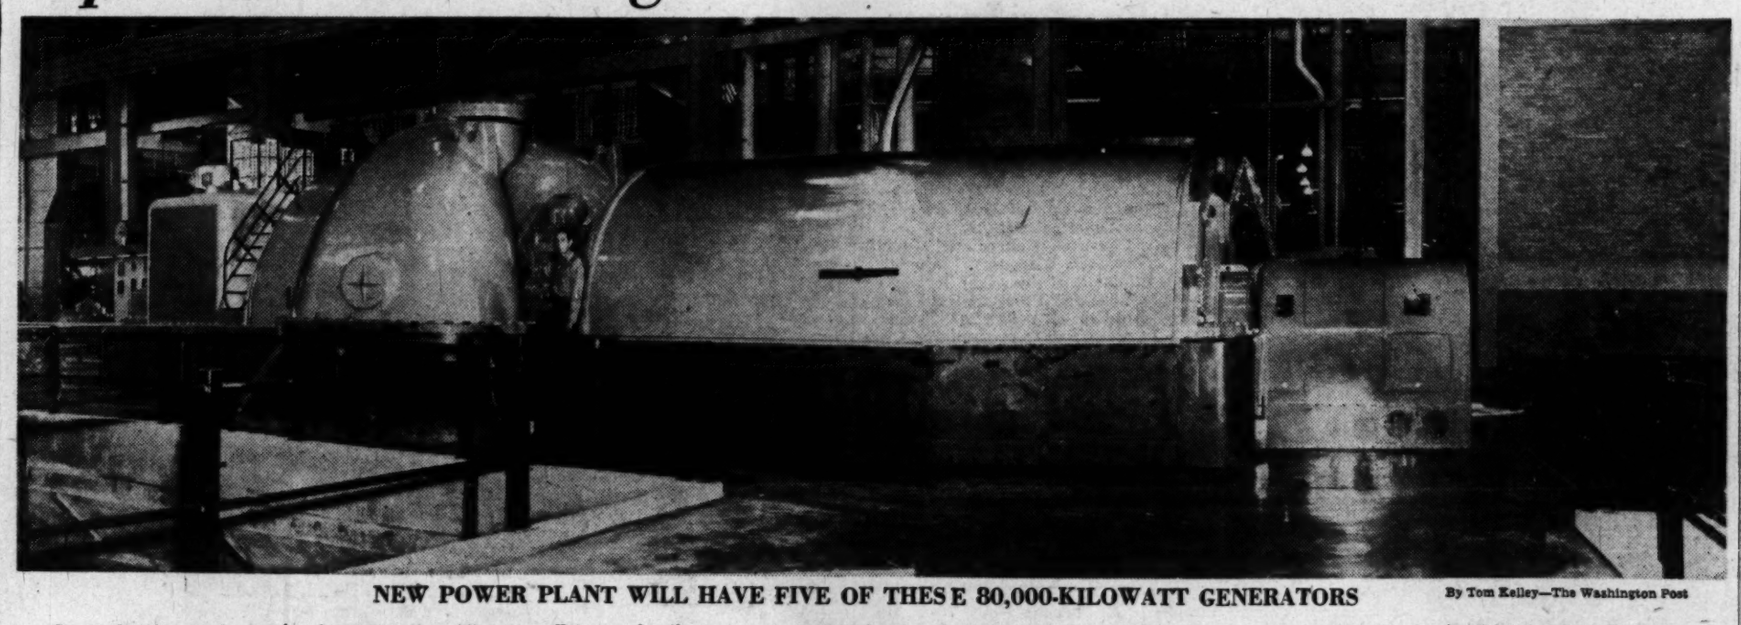
In his affidavit, signed March 24, Barrett charged that the telephone number Warfield 6600 was called from Barber's to get race results as late as January 7. In an accompanying affidavit, this number was identified by the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. as being listed on March 25 to State Wide.

"The telephone company's affidavit corrected any shortcomings of the Barrett affidavit," Judge Tamm said.

Judge Tamm also ruled that the Government must provide each defendant with a bill of particulars, setting out where and when the gambling offenses are alleged to have been committed.

He denied defense motions to dismiss the indictments against the eight.

Pepco Dedicates Huge Power Plant in Alexandria



NEW POWER PLANT WILL HAVE FIVE OF THESE 80,000-KILOWATT GENERATORS By Tom Kelley—The Washington Post

By V. R. Montanari
Post Reporter

Potomac Electric Power Co. officials, who had been holding their breaths since July 21, breathed again yesterday as Pepco President Alfred G. Neal officially opened a new generating plant in Alexandria.

On that sultry July day, air-conditioning demands plus power and light needs of the Washington area used an all-time peak of 497,000 kilowatts of electricity from the system, whose capacity then was 505,000 kilowatts.

A storm, causing office workers and householders to turn on their lights, could have pushed the load up by 30,000 more kilowatts, officials pointed out yesterday.

The single boiler-turbo generator unit thus far installed in the new Potomac River Generating Station off Mount Vernon Boulevard, north of Bashford lane, Alexandria, adds 80,000 kilowatts to the system's capacity.

The largest power unit Pepco ever installed and the most powerful south of Philadelphia, the 125-foot-high boiler and 550-ton generator could supply electric power to a city of 125,000.

A second such unit is expected to be installed in the giant Alexandria plant by next June, and space for three more is available for the Washington area's future electric power needs.

At a dedicatory luncheon yesterday for 250 Federal, District, Maryland and Virginia officials, Neal and other officials explained that it was realized in 1940 that the Benning rd. and Buzzards Point generating stations would in the near future be inadequate to serve the District, adjacent Maryland counties, the Pentagon and some 2000 customers of Pepco's subsidiary in Virginia, the Braddock Light & Power Co.

The 23-acre site near the river was purchased in 1942, but other work and the shortage of materials during the war delayed construction. The new plant, built with Pepco money for the Braddock firm, will be taken over by Pepco in the pending merger of the parent company and subsidiary.

One of the principal reasons for choosing the site on the river was that each boiler requires 193 million gallons of water a day—more than the entire City of Washington uses in a day for ordinary purposes.

Coal delivery was another factor. Besides being close to the Mount Vernon highway, a railroad siding extends to the plant.

The 11-story-high boiler, which was sending about 40,000 kilowatts into the Pepco system yesterday, eats up more than 33 tons of soft coal a day at capacity. Yet, as guests toured the plant and viewed the 193-foot stacks from the roof, no smoke of any kind could be seen.

Neal pointed out that some $400,000 is being spent on each unit to remove, by mechanical and electrical means, 99 percent of the fly ash and cinder which would otherwise float over the area.

Another device, used to send any sulphur gases from the stacks high into the air, is a blower which shoots the fumes out at 60 miles an hour.

The huge plant, filled with considerable automatic machinery and devices, can be almost completely operated by five or six men at the giant control panels, company officials said.

The new generating station, which will cost an estimated 60-million dollars when all five generating units are installed, is part of an expansion program representing an expected investment of about 96-million dollars in the seven-year period ending in 1952, Neal said.

This is almost as much as the 100 million invested by the company in its first 50 years of existence, he pointed out.

Fee Order Stayed

D. C. Eases Up On Virginia Physicians

The District Commission on Licensure yesterday eased up on Virginia physicians who practice here—at least until next January.

The commission, in special meeting, voted to "hold in abeyance" its order, effective last Saturday, which required Virginia doctors practicing here to get $1 certificates in advance for each patient they treated within the District.

Yesterday's order also restored the old $1 "borderline certificates" with which Virginia doctors formerly practiced here as freely as they wished.

The restrictive order, which was voted at the last regular quarterly meeting of the licensure commission, on September 19, was an admittedly nettling measure to prod the Virginia doctors into seeking change of their own State law, which requires District physicians practicing there to pay a $50 license fee.

Explaining yesterday's "abeyance" order, the licensure commission members said they had received assurance from Virginia doctors and legislators that remedial legislation will be introduced at the Virginia General Assembly, which opens in January.

If the Virginia Assembly fails to act to establish a reciprocal arrangement of medical practice with Washington, the commission said the restrictive licensing will be reinstated.

Four Alexandria Restaurants Get Grade A Permits

Four more Alexandria eating establishments have qualified for Grade A classificaton, the city health department announced yesterday.

They are: S. S. Kresge Co., 604 King st.; Circle Barbecue, 911 N. Washington st.; Apex Lunch, Duke st. extended; and Blue Fox, 1905 Mt. Vernon ave. Thirty-two of the 123 eating places in the city have been awarded Grade A cards since a series of inspections started two months ago.

Dr. T. F. McGough pointed out this does not mean the other restaurants are unsanitary. Establishments with Grade B cards comply with the major items of public health standards, he said. However, the health department has so far withheld Grade B cards in the hope that owners will make an effort to reach Grade A standards.

Capt. Otha R. Sanders of the Harbor Precinct testified that Carr did not report for duty at 4 p.m. on September 15. He said he had left word with Pvt. A. V. Dixon, the station clerk, that if Carr telephoned, he was not to be granted sick leave and he was to report to the station house.

Dixon testified that a woman telephoned and asked that Carr be placed on sick leave.

Speculation About Fate of Amelia Earhart Revived at Opening of Memorial to Flier

The Washington Post

IN HER DAUGHTER'S MEMORY—Mrs. Amy Otis Earhart unveils the display at the National Air Museum in honor of her daughter, the late Amelia Earhart Putnam. Curator Paul Garber who assisted in organizing the display accepts it for the museum

Speculation about the veiled fate of Amelia Earhart, who vanished 12 years ago in flight over the South Pacific, was touched off again yesterday in ceremonies honoring the courageous flier.

It was Capt. Clarence Williams, USNR—he charted many of the woman flier's flights—who kindled a glimmering hope that she did not perish that day of June 2, 1937, when last heard from by a faint, crackling voice radio.

At ceremonies opening an exhibit commemorating Amelia Earhart at the National Air Museum, Captain Williams flatly stated:

"I never did believe she was lost that day when she was so near her goal, Howland Island—she was too expert a navigator, too fine a pilot."

". . . It's Been So Long . . ."

His voice thinned as he added: "I always thought she crash-landed, maybe on a tiny coral atoll . . . But it's been so long since then . . ."

He later told a reporter that he had no information that it was true, but, "there's been a lot of talk she was taken by the Japs."

This was the theory of the mother of the wiry, tousel-haired aviatrix, 86-year-old Mrs. Amy Otis Earhart, who unveiled the display yesterday.

Smartly attired in a black tailored suit, a jaunty multicolored feather shaped like a bird's wing in her hat, Mrs. Earhart thanked those who arranged the exhibit "to keep my daughter's name alive."

In a recent interview she said she was convinced "Amelia landed on a tiny atoll and was picked up by a Japanese fishing boat that took her to the Marshall Islands, then under Japanese control."

Rumors Beget Rumors

And so it has been since Amelia vanished during that 2500-mile flight over water from Lae, New Guinea, to the tiny sandbar island of Howland—rumors have begot rumors.

Again and again through the years there have been reports indicating hope Amelia and her navigator, Fred J. Noonan survived—perhaps found refuge on an uncharted Pacific island, after the outside world received their last, static-interrupted message, placing their location about 281 miles north of Howland:

"281 North Howland . . Call KHAQQ (the plane's call letters) . . . beyond north . . . don't hold with us much longer . . . above water . . . shut off . . ."

For 15 days Navy ships—a carrier, a battleship, a minesweeper, three destroyers and a Coast Guard cutter—churned an area of 250,000 square miles in a vain search for a trace of the woman, the man, or the plane. Planes fought through stormy weather, turning up not one clew.

On July 18, the Navy gave up; its ships veered back to base.

"There Isn't a Chance"

Still hopeful friends in 1940 financed a search of the Ellice and Gilbert Islands. After scouring thousands of miles of the South Pacific, Capt. Irving Johnson concluded "there isn't a chance she will ever be found."

But others have refused to accept finality of the facts, perhaps because this woman who accomplished so many firsts — first woman to fly the Atlantic, first woman to fly across the United States, first woman to fly an autogyro, among others—perhaps because Amelia Earhart had became a symbol of high adventure, always to be crowned with success.

Whatever the fate of the woman, the memory of her career will live enshrined in the Nation's archives. Centerpiece of the exhibit at the National Air Museum is a bronze bust of Amelia Earhart. Her face is tilted back slightly and to the right, as though she were peering at the early morning sky, and saying as she often did in her precise, fluent voice: "I want to leave at the crack of dawn."

Armory Board Authorized to Hire Own Lawyer

If the District Armory Board needs a lawyer, it can go out and hire one, the District Commissioners decided yesterday.

The three-man board, which includes Commissioner John Russell Young, asked the city heads for an opinion on whether the corporation counsel could represent them in legal matters.

The corporation counsel himself, Vernon E. West, wrote an opinion stating that he could legally do so, but urged that since the board had its own income it should employ private counsel. The Commissioners concurred.

Spanish Find Lawmaker's Stolen Trousers and $3800

Madrid, Oct. 7 (U.P.).—Spanish police today closed the case of the Congressman's stolen trousers by arresting a gang of railroad thieves and recovering the missing garment, complete with $3800 and a rabbit's foot in one pocket.

Juan Acosta Ramos, leader of the railroad thieves, was shot and wounded seriously by police.

Zaragoza authorities said the trousers were "hooked" out of the train compartment occupied by Representatives Richards (D., S. C.) and Keogh (D., N. Y.), by a thief who poked a long fishing pole through the window.

The two Congressmen, who yesterday flatly denied they had been robbed, explained today they "didn't want publicity over such a minor occurrence."

Keogh said the money was intended to pay the fares of all members of a group of Congressmen touring Spain.

Even after admitting the theft, Keogh insisted the missing money amounted to less than $1000 until police announced that $3800 had been recovered.

"I knew the Spanish police would arrest somebody, but I never dreamed they'd arrest the right ones," Keogh said.

The money and the trousers will be returned to the Congressman before they leave here Monday.

Special police from Madrid broke the case.

Assessment More Than Halved On McKenney Property

The Maryland State Tax Commission has reduced a $77,000 assessment on property in Kensington owned by the heirs of the late Frederick D. McKenney, Washington attorney, to $36,900, it was learned yesterday.

The more than 50 percent reduction was ordered following an appeal by Mrs. Frederica McKenney Rapley and Mrs. Virginia McKenney Dunn, daughters of the late attorney, their counsel, James H. Pugh, said.

He received official notice of the reduced assessments on the property, 40 lots and an 18-room house, yesterday, he said. The hearing took place on Wednesday.

The original assessment was appealed to t' tax commission, Pugh said, after the Montgomery County Appeal Tax Court upheld the assessment imposed by County Assessment Supervisor Wilton T. Allen.

Pugh contended in the appeal that the original valuation was excessive and that it was obtained by methods at variance with the State law. The law, he said, provides for land and buildings to be assessed separately and that buildings should be assessed only in the proportion that they add to the "fair market value of the land."

According to the attorney, the tax commission ruled the land in question would be more valuable without the house, which he termed "a very old structure."

Barkley Says Congress To Quit Next Saturday

Vice President Barkley said yesterday the present outlook is for Congress to adjourn sometime next week—Saturday at the latest.

Talking with reporters after a Cabinet meeting, Barkley said some night sessions may be necessary.

"We will quit Saturday anyhow," he said, "if something doesn't come along to upset the applecart."

U. N. Unit Target Of Phoned Threats In Jerusalem

Tel Aviv, Israel, Oct. 7 (AP).—New anonymous threats to United Nations personnel were reported today in Jerusalem, but the Israeli government here said it did not believe the lives of U. N. representatives are in danger.

Yedioth Hayom, an Israeli German-language newspaper in Jerusalem, quoted an anonymous caller as saying members of the U. N. Economic Survey Mission, headed by Gordon Clapp, would be "exterminated." Observers said, however, the call probably was the work of a crank. Clapp is chairman of the Tennessee Valley Authority board.

Clapp's mission is due in Tel Aviv by air Sunday. Police said the usual precautions would be taken.

Ateneo Americano To Honor Muna Lee, Four Other Women

By Genevieve Reynolds

FIVE distinguished women writers will be spotlighted on Columbus Day, October 12. They are the sole representatives of their sex in Ateneo Americano de Washington, which will be formally launched then at the Pan American Union.

The Nation's Capital can claim the one active member of the group—Mrs. Muna Lee, author and acting chief, River Plate branch, American Republics area division of the State Department. Two are honorary members—Chile's poet Gabriela Mistral and Senora Juan de Ibarbourous, poet of Uruguay. Essayist Dr. Concha Melendez of Puerto Rico is a corresponding member as is Mrs. Dorothy Schoms of Texas.

Organized June 22, 1949, purpose of Ateneo Americao de Washington is the furtherance of intellectual cooperation among writers of this hemisphere. But eligibility hinges on those whose work contributes to an extension or a better knowledge of hispanic culture.

Mississippi-born Mrs. Lee has translated from Spanish to English the principal works of some 20 Latin American poets Her recent translation of the Jorge Carrera Andrade's "Secret Country" was hailed on both sides of the Rio Grande as an extraordinary accomplishment.

Muna, however, is even better known for her original verse, "Sea Change." And she will have another original book roll off the presses this fall.

Gabriela Mistral won the 1945 Nobel Prize in literature. On a visit to Washington in 1946 she remarked that she didn't understand admiration "but I like for people to like me." The world renowned Chilean poet is her country's consul general in Los Angeles.

Originated in Spain

ATENEOS—cultural centers—originated in Spain, spread through Latin America. Last summer the idea was put into action by the Ambassador from Honduras, Rafael Helidoro Valle; Mrs. Lee, and others vitally interested in Latin American good will and understanding.

Dr. Alberto Lleras Camargo, Secretary General, Organization of American States, will preside when Ateneo is inaugurated October 12.

Incidentally, a local group of Ateneo members journeyed to Baltimore last week to pay homage to Edgar Allan Poe during Poe week. They visited Poe's restored home in that city and read a poem to the genius writer. A Venezuelan composed and read the poem. And it was a Venezuelan who first translated one of Poe's works into Spanish. First of the United States writers to be known in Latin America, Poe is the best loved and most influential.

Ambassador Valle, scholar and writer, won the Maria Moores Cabot Award for his contribution to inter-American understanding. The award is administered by the Columbia University School of Journalism.

Feasts of Reasons—and Others

ARTISTS, poets, novelists, essayists, critics and connoisseurs of literature will converge upon the Capital today from some 30 States. First on the docket is a luncheon today given by Miss Clara Manderschied, president of the D. C. branch, NLAPW, at the Washington Club. Honor guests will include the national officers, Dr. Margaret Sebree, president; Mrs. Cloyd Heck Marvin, first vice president; plus the past presidents and the executive board of the D. C. branch.

Mrs. Richard Sappington Giese of Sewickly, Pa., national historian of the NIAPW, will give her eighth annual breakfast for the executive board members, 9 p. m. Monday at the Willard Hotel. Again Dr. Sebree and Mrs. Marvin will be honor guests.

Ask Anne About Using Baking Powder

I seem to remember from high school chemistry that it is very easy to mix one's own baking powder from sodium bicarbonate and cream of tartar or some phosphate. Since moving to the Washington area I have had varying success with leavening, though I measure accurately, keep the lid of the baking powder can on tight, and buy at large supermarkets. I should greatly appreciate directions for mixing a tartrate and a double-acting baking powder when ready to use it. A. L. G.

It seems unlikely to me that mixing your own baking powder will solve your problem. To duplicate the excellent baking powders on the market would require more time in experimentation than the average housewife would have.

I'm wondering if your difficulty does not arise from the use of the wrong type of baking powder? As you no doubt know, there are three general types of baking powder on the market. Each type contains baking soda to furnish the carbon dioxide, an acid to react with the soda when wet and release the carbon dioxide, and a starch or starch and calcium carbonate to act as a hydrating agent and prevent premature loss of carbon dioxide in the can.

Baking powders are classified into three groups by the type of acid reacting compound in each. These three groups are the tartrate; phosphate, including hydrated and anhydrous phosphate, and the S.A.S. (sodium aluminum sulphate) phosphate. Since the baking powders in each group release carbon dioxide at different rates of speed, it is necessary to know into which group the powder you use falls. You will find the name of the type of each baking powder on the brand label.

Generally speaking, upon mixing with liquid, carbon dioxide is released fastest from the tartrate baking powders, slowest from the S.A.S. or so-called double-acting, and the phosphate powders are between the two in speed of releasing gas. Therefore, in recipes such as cakes, where long beating is required, better volume is obtained if you use a slow-acting powder such as one of the S.A.S., or increase the amount of tartrate or phosphate powder. The best plan is to use the baking power manufacturer's recommended amounts given on the can.

This following table of equivalents may be helpful to you:

1 teaspoon S.A.S.-phosphate baking powder is equivalent to: 1½ teaspoons phosphate baking powder.

½ teaspoon soda plus 1¾ teaspoons cream of tartar.

Would it be possible to change a walnut coffee table, walnut drop-leaf table, and wookwork on a chair to black lacquer? I have a blond oak television set and expected to get blond furniture to match, but since I want to get new furniture later I will have to put up with what I have for a little while. How can I change this furniture to black lacquer? I would like to change the atmosphere of the room without spending too much money. T. R. P.

To apply lacquer to a surface, the old finish must be entirely removed because the lacquer would soften the old finish and cause smearing. Since you want a job which requires as little work as possible, why don't you apply one of the quick drying high gloss black enamels? These can be applied directly over the present finish and would give a finish similar to lacquer. Then, too, enamel is easier to apply then lacquer. Before you apply the enamel, sand the furniture thoroughly to smooth the surfaces and break any shine which may be present. After sanding, wipe with a cloth wet with varsol or turpentine to clean and remove all dust.

Needs 20 Stitches

Boy Bitten Seriously By Chow Dog

A 10-year-old Arlington boy was severely injured yesterday when a neighbor's chow dog bit him on the right arm and left leg as the boy passed by the house of the dog's owner.

The youngster, Thomas Weaver, 10, of 3827 S. 8th st., Arlington, had 20 stitches taken in his right arm at Arlington Hospital, according to his aunt, Mrs. Arleen Miller. The hospital reported him in satisfactory condition.

Mrs. Miller said she was just getting out of her automible as her nephew passed by 802 S. Oakland st., the home of Lieut. Col. Lenwood Griffin.

"I heard him holler, and I saw the dog (the Griffins' chow) knock him down," she said.

With the aid of Mrs. Griffin, the dog was called off and the boy was then rushed to Arlington Hospital, Mrs. Miller said.

The dog's owner, Colonel Griffin, said the animal would be locked up for two weeks, under health department orders, as a routine precaution against rabies. He added, "We're going to have to get rid of him, after that."

The three-day annual convention of the Mid-Atlantic Shrine Association will be climaxed here today by the traditional parade, scheduled to start at 11:30 a. m. at 3rd st. and Constitution ave. nw. and end at Almas Temple, 13th and K sts. nw.

Last night, Almas Temple sponsored a three-hour show at the Uline Arena, staged by Milton Berle, television comedian, for the benefit of the local group's charity and special activities funds.

Berle, who was met on arrival by the Shriners' Illustrious Potentate Renah F. Camalier, was presented with the key to the city by Commissioner John Russell Young at the District Building.

The more than 1000 visiting Shriners held business meetings throughout yesterday, and will elect officers this morning prior to the parade.

The route of the parade, which will require some 90 minutes, will be north on 3d st., west on F st. to 15th st., along Pennsylvania ave. in front of the White House, north on 18th st., and east on K st. to the reviewing stand opposite Almas Temple.

Following the parade, patrols of several participating temples will drill in competition, before the reviewing stand.

F st. and K st. buses and streetcars will be rerouted between 11:15 a. m. and 12:30 p. m., Capital Transit Co. officials announced.

Those usually operating on F st. between 5th st. and 14th st. nw. will go over Pennsylvania ave., from the Peace Monument to 14th st. Buses usually operating on K st. between 11th and 18th sts. nw. will go over I st. instead.

Girl's Plea Sets Forger Free, But Not to Wed

Baltimore, Oct. 7. (AP)—Pretty Peggy Peterson got her man out of jail today, but she can't marry him for another year.

Criminal Court Judge Robert France suspended a 10-year prison sentence he had imposed upon William J. Sansbury for forgery, placing him on probation for three years. The judge said he was suspending the sentence largely because of Peggy's faith in Sansbury.

The two met in San Quentin prison, where Peggy was an employe and Sansbury an inmate, serving a term for burglary. They fell in love.

Sansbury was paroled and sent to Maryland to face forgery charges. Peggy followed him here from San Francisco to plead for his release. She told Judge France she was sure Sansbury would go straight.

Sansburg was released on three conditions: That none of Peggy's funds are to be used in making $1450 restitution, that Sansbury and Peggy are not marry for a year; and that Sansbury must use and refunds on his service life insurance to make restitution for his forgeries.

The Department of Parole found Sansburg a job at $130 a month. The department will set the terms of his probation. Sansburg is 24; Peggy, 22.

Jury Convicts Sexton, 52, of Shooting Wife

Louis B. Elze, 52-year-old sexton, was convicted yesterday in District Court of shooting and wounding his estranged wife last August.

Elze, a slight and meek-appearing man, surprised the jury when he calmly admitted that 27 years ago he escaped prison in New York, where he had been serving a term for highway robbery, and is still wanted there.

Assistant United States Attorney Edward L. Carey charged Elze walked into the 4542 MacArthur blvd. nw. home of his wife, Mrs. Augusta Elze, and fired three shots, one of them hitting her in the chest.

Elze admitted the shooting but said it was accidental. Carey said it was the aftermath of an argument over domestic matters.

Elze was acquitted of a companion charge of assault with intent to kill. Judge Alexander Holtzoff referred the case to the probation office for investigation, without date set for sentencing.

Teacher Unit Decides to Elect Later

The 1485 northern Virginia teachers attending the annual meeting of District H of the Virginia Education Association in Alexandria yesterday went home without electing new officers because of a procedural dispute.

The group, meeting at George Washington High School, was prepared to vote individually on candidates when it was found that the organization's constitution called for voting by delegates, each representing 25 members.

Warren County, one of the nine communities forming District H, had sent only enough delegates to represent it. The others turned up in force and had not elected delegates to vote for them.

Final decision was that the groups should go back to their own communities to vote as they wish and send in the results.

District President C. M. Richmond, principal of Arlington's Washington-Lee High School, said the question arose after the unusual action of nominating two candidates for president. There is usually no contest, he said.

Candidates are Miss Catherine Hopper, eighth grade coordinator in Fairfax County, and Paul Hounschell, superintendent of schools in Culpeper County.

Richmond said this provision of the constitution probably will be changed.

Communities represented at the meeting were Alexandria, Arlington, Culpeper, Fairfax, Fauquier, Loudoun, Prince William, Rappahannock and Warren counties.

Alfred M. Rinaudot, Bethesda architect, has been elected president of the Kiwanis Club of Bethesda to succeed John Sadler, attorney.

DADDY'S GIRL IN PRINT: As if Fred MacMurray doesn't have enough trouble as coach of a losing football team, his eldest writes a startling confession yarn. Wife Maureen O'Hara and Adviser Rudy Vallee also are scandalized in this scene from the Capitol's current comedy, "Father Was a Fullback"

One on the Aisle—

'Fullback' Is Fun For the Cast, Too

By Richard L. Coe

THE CAPITOL has a happily amusing little comedy in "Father Was a Fullback," a yarn about the home life of that saddest sack of the fall months, the coach of a losing football team.

Fred MacMurray plays this fellow in that likable style that's made him a long-time favorite. His household includes teen-age daughters in whom almost everyone will find counterparts of youngsters they know and love.

Father was a fullback long before this yarn gets going; now his team hasn't won a game all season and, praise be to the script-writers, his boys never do win a game. What gets in father's hair, even more than this goose egg habit that so ruffles State's alumni, are his two daughters.

Betty Lynn is the elder, a lass who thinks she'll never rate whistles from the wolves. Father and a next door neighbor try to dream up a boy who's interested in her, but when they have to produce him physically, too many cooks spoil the froth and Betty catches on to the setup. With the resilience of youth, she decides to pass up the boys, take to writing for money. She dreams up a yarn about a high school bubble dancer. What this brings on you'll enjoy discovering.

Definitely helpful is the screen play by four writers: Mary Loos, Richard Sale, Aleen Leslie and Casey Robinson. They were virtually inspired to keep State from getting a last-minute touchdown, but they manage to leave you hopeful about next season with the discovery of one Hercules, who wants to go to State after all.

The cast must have had fun making this one, for it goes over nicely to the audience. Among the principals is Thelma Ritter as a wondrously honest maid of all work who bets against the master's team because she admits she'd rather have cash than tears. Rudy Vallee is on tap as an alumnus of power and wee Natalie Wood is amusing as the younger sister who, asked if she doesn't like Sister Betty, replies: "Sure I love her, bless her pointed little head."

Yes, so long as you don't expect constant guffaws, you'll enjoy "Father Was a Fullback."

"FATHER WAS A FULLBACK," a 20th Century-Fox picture, produced by Fred Kilmar, directed by John M. Stahl, screenplay by Allen Leslie, Casey Robinson, Mary Loos and Richard Sale. At the Capitol.

11 Reds Are First Political Party Heads on Trial Since 1798 Alien Laws, Counsel Tells Jury

New York, Oct. 7 (AP).—Defense counsel for top American Communists said today in their opening jury summations that leaders of a political party are on trial for, the first time since the 1798 Alien and Sedition Laws.

Two defense lawyers addressed the jury as the 38-week-old trial entered its climactic phase. It is expected to reach the jury by next Friday.

The 11 men on trial, member of the party's American politburo, are charged with conspiracy to advocate the violent overthrow of the United States Government.

Abraham J. Isserman, who made the first summation, declared "this is a trial of a political party, a minority political party, a working class political party.

"Take out the resolutions and the political activities of the Communist Party since July, 1945, from the evidence in this case and there is nothing left for you to consider."

He told the jurors that "for the first time since the Alien and Sedition Acts of 1798 we find leaders of a political party on trial."

Political leaders and editors were convicted under these laws, but the acts soon were repealed "and those jailed were released and fines were repaid," Isserman said.

The attorney declared that the jury's verdict would have a bearing whether Americans would continue to have the right to hear political opinion of all kinds, even opinion some persons think is dangerous.

Had such a right not prevailed in the early days of the Nation, there would have been no Constitution, he added.

The other summation was made by Louis F. McCabe.

He told the jurors their duty is not to vote against communism and that a vote of acquittal is not approval of Communists or communism or Communist doctrines.

Common Cold Still Defies Medical World

Chicago, Oct. 7 (AP).—Modern medicine, which slays germs by the billions, is virtually helpless against the snuffles of a common cold, the Journal of the American Medical Association said today.

The publication says patent medicine makers don't know the cold cure secret either.

Apparently, you just can't cure it. It runs its course.

The magazine says it's a pretty safe bet the best way to ease a common cold is to rest quietly in bed.

It seems well established that an oncoming cold can sometimes be aborted by "reasonable doses" of alcohol. This, the magazine says, is because it brings a rush of blood into cold skin or nose lining.

So, a doctor just eases acute symptoms, such as headache (with aspirin), and burning sensations in the nose or throat (by moisture with steam inhalations, or common table salt solution syringing).

But, the "sane and effective measure" is to stay warm and relaxed in bed, especially if fever is present.

Nose drops? Gargles? Volatile inhalers? Diet? Water-drinking? Salves? The Journal says their benefits are generally exaggerated in conversation and advertising.

Truman Off For Weekend In Virginia

President Truman yesterday left by automobile to spend a quiet weekend near Charlottesville, Va. His hosts are Stanley Woodward, the State Department's Chief of Protocol, and Mrs. Woodward. The Woodwards live at Colle, part of the old Thomas Jefferson estate a mile from Monticello, Jefferson's home.

The President will return to Washington Sunday afternoon.

Accompanying him on the drive were Brig. Gen. Wallace Graham, personal physician; Maj. Gen. Harry H. Vaughan, military aide; Press Secretary Charles G. Ross, and Administrative Assistants Charles Murphy and David Stowe.

Earlier yesterday Mr. Truman smacked his lips over $2-a-pound Missouri ham at a breakfast with fellow Missourians and a few guests at the Capitol.

"As good as I ever ate," Mr. Truman said, spearing a choice bit on a fork and holding it up for Speaker Rayburn (D., Tex.) to sniff.

Representative Moulder (D., Mo.), a freshman Congressman, was host at the breakfast for Missouri's House delegation with the President as honor guest. They ate in the Speaker's dining room.

In addition to the Missouri ham, the menu included honeydew melon, scrambled eggs, hot biscuits, "red-eye" ham gravy, honey and jelly and coffee.

Moulder recently attended the Boone County Fair in Missouri and bid in one of the prize hams there for $2 a pound.

Guests included Speaker Rayburn, Majority Floor Leader McCormack (D., Mass.), Representatives Price (D., Ill.), and Fisher (D., Tex.) and a group of newsmen. The only Republican present was Representative Dewey Short of Missouri.

Coercion Tried In Olds Case, Byrd Charges

By The Associated Press

Senator Byrd (D., Va.) accused President Truman and Democratic Chairman William M. Boyle jr. yesterday of a "deliberate effort to threaten and coerce" Senators on the Olds appointment.

In a statement to the Senate, Byrd asserted that the President, through Boyle, had threatened to take away patronage away from Democrats who vote against confirmation of Leland Olds, reappointed to the Federal Power commission.

A Senate Commerce Subcommittee voted 7 to 0 against approving the Olds nomination and the full Commerce Committee voted 10 to 2 against confirmation.

Opponents of confirmation told a reporter yesterday they have 45 of the 96 Senators pledged to vote against confirmation and Olds' rejection has been conceeded privately by most of those backing the nomination. "Radical" writings by Olds in the 1920's were cited as cause of most of the opposition.

Cites Boyle Telegram

Citing a telegram sent by Boyle to Democratic National Committee officials in each State, Byrd said that President Truman "appears to believe that the United States Senate should be an adjunct to his own office, whereby he can issue orders as he pleases."

"In the 16 years I have been in the Senate," Byrd said, "I do not think I have ever seen a more deliberate effort to threaten and coerce the members of the Senate than that contained in this telegram from Chairman Boyle." Boyle telegraphed party officials asking them to help influence the Senators from their State to vote for Olds. President Truman told his news conference Thursday he had directed Boyle to make this effort.

Observing that the Senate should act as a jury on appointments, Byrd said this telegram threatened, by implication at least, loss of patronage to Senators who didn't go along. He noted that most Federal appointive jobs are handed out with the national committee's approval.

Perfectly Proper, Truman Says

Mr. Truman told his news conference that it was perfectly proper to make Olds' confirmation a party matter. He added that James A. Farley, the former national chairman, had put similar heat on him when Mr. Truman was a member of the Senate.

Byrd said he didn't know about Mr. Truman's case, but that Farley never had tried to put the heat on him.

"It is such action as this that will lead to a dictatorial government and destroy the checks and balances that were established by those men who founded our great democracy," Byrd said. In his telegram to the Democratic officials, Boyle said that involved in the fight over Olds "is a straight issue of Democratic action to protect the American people against the monopoly-seeking power lobby which wants Olds kept off the commission because he worked in the public interest during the two terms he has already served on the commission."

"Defeat of his nomination would be a defeat for the millions of Americans who are entitled to fair power rates and a victory for the power lobbyists and the Republican Party."

Cow Sets Record As Butterfat Producer

Waterloo, Iowa, Oct. 7 (AP).—A brown Swiss cow from Morristown, N. J., established a record first at the National Dairy Cattle Congress here today.

The cow, which holds the world's record production mark of 1228 pounds of butterfat in three times a day milking over a 365-day period, today was judged national grand champion female of the brown Swiss breed.

Officials said it is the first time a production record holder has ever been named grand champion of any breed. The cow's name is Royal's Rapture of Lee's Hill.

Veteran Kills Self as Wife, Mother Plead

Grand Rapids, Mich., Oct. 7 (AP). A war veteran today shot himself and fell dying at the feet of his wife and his mother after 3 hours of tense efforts to coax him out of a hot, dark attic.

The veteran, Roger Kohlenberger, 32, had lain in the attic bleeding from slashed wrists while a young psychiatrist and two policemen knelt near him and talked steadily.

He kept a German war souvenir pistol pointed constantly at his head.

At the foot of the attic ladder, Kohlenberger's 30-year-old wife, Cola, and his mother wept and prayed for him to come down.

Finally, he said he would. He stepped on the top rung of the ladder leading down to the apartment where he lived with his wife and 2-year-old son. Then suddenly he fired one shot into his head.

Two hours later he died in a hospital.

Police said the gun might have gone off by accident.

Kohlenberger, a college graduate, crept into the attic after arising this morning. He slashed his wrists. Blood dripping into their apartment gave his wife the first indication of his whereabouts. Police were called and Capt. Dewey Beaver, Dr. Kenneth Nichel and Patrolman Andrew Felix took turns talking to Kohlenberger but to no avail.. During the war Kohlenberger served in the Tenth Mountain Division. His wife said he had been treated for a nervous disorder.

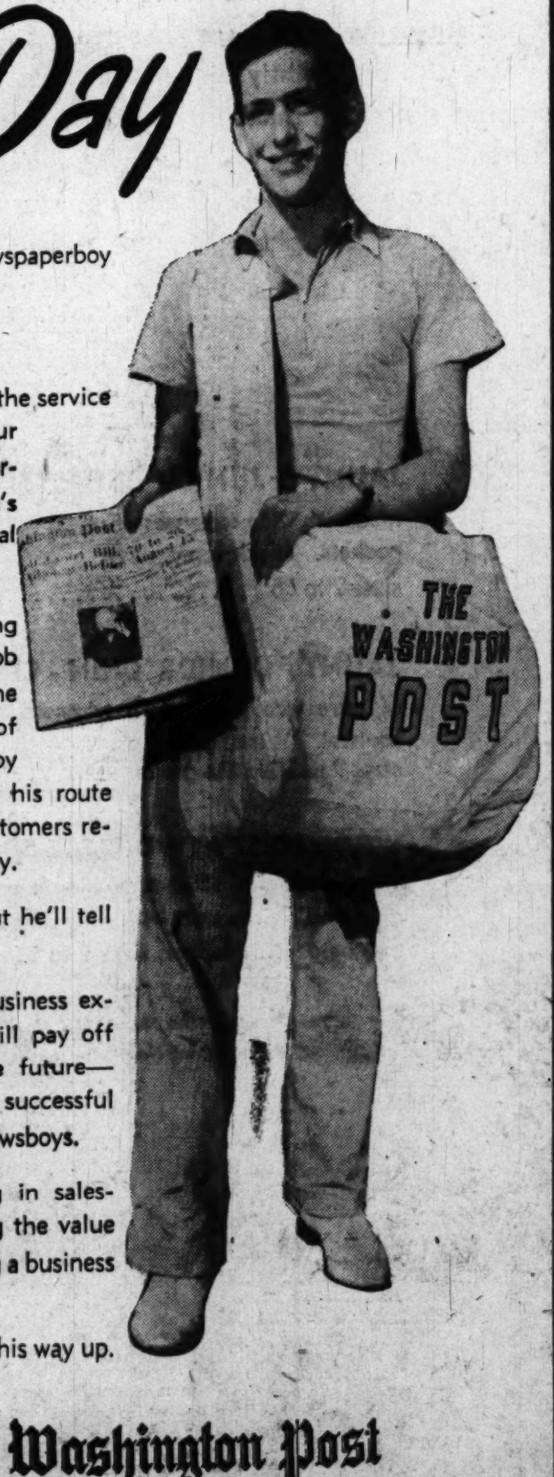
His Day



Today is National Newspaperboy Day.

Yes, this is his day.

Give some thought to the service the boy who delivers your Post each morning performs and you'll agree he's entitled to this special honor.

This enterprising young businessman is on the job in the early hours of the morning in all kinds of weather. Undisturbed by rain or snow, he covers his route making sure that his customers receive the news of the day.

He has a hard job, but he'll tell you it's worth it.

He knows that the business experience he's getting will pay off in big dividends in the future—many of the Nation's successful men got their starts as newsboys.

He's getting training in salesmanship. He's learning the value of money. He's running a business of his own.

Fenwick Assails Welfare Request

Richmond, Va., Oct. 7 (AP).—State Senator Charles R. Fenwick of Arlington today took issue with the State Department of Welfare and Institutions on its relief appropriations requests to the Governor's advisory budget committee.

In a letter made public by Governor Tuck, Fenwick urged consideration by the Governor and his budget makers of a policy that has been indorsed widely by local public welfare superintendents.

Governor Tuck, in reply, said the State does not have to match funds provided by other Government agencies for any purpose.

"I do not feel that I am obligated to provide money in the budget for matching either Federal or local funds for any activity to an extent which would unfairly discriminate against other essential needs of the State government," the Governor wrote Fenwick.

Speaking for the State Welfare Advisory Council, Fenwick backed the demands of localities for greater State contributions for programs in which the Federal Government does not participate and to allow the localities to expand Federally aided programs beyond the limits set for Federal aid.

Fenwick's letter pointed out that the General Assembly's welfare program contemplated a matching of funds by the State if the localities would raise local funds.

"This program," Fenwick wrote, "has the unusual distinction of finding the localities appropriating moneys which are not matched by the State. As difficult as it is to persuade local governing bodies to appropriate the money, it would seem that when this is done the State should appropriate sufficient money to meet the needs of the locality. If the State fails to carry out this obligation, then an added burden is placed on the locality which it can ill afford."

"I do not find in your letter, Tuck wrote, "any concern over the financial ability of the State at this time to match Federal and local funds for welfare purposes, nor any consideration for many other essential activities which merit sympathetic attention by me in the preparation of the budget."

7 Crash Deaths Blamed by Jury On N. C. Officials

Nashville, N. C., Oct. 7 (AP).—A coroner's jury today charged a school bus wreck that cost seven lives to what it called negligence of highway and school officials.

It absolved the drivers of the school bus and of the ice truck with which the bus collided on a bridge near Middlesex yesterday. The jury reported to Nash County Coroner Van B. Matthews:

"We find that the North Carolina State Highway and Public Works Commission, Nash County division, is guilty of criminal negligence in failure to clear right of way of road.

"We further find that the Nash County Board of Educaton is guilty of negligence in overloading this bus above the State law.

"We recommend that the grand jury of Nash County consider and take action on these two counts."

Boy Suffocates In Refrigerator, Unused in Cellar

Louisville, Ky., Oct. 7 (U.P.).—A question exchanged between Mr. and Mrs. James D. Whelan today of "Where are the kids?" started a brief search here that found a tragic answer.

Their 4-year-old son, Ivan, was found dead of suffocation in an unused refrigerator in the basement. A little playmate, Paul Mueller, who was with Ivan, was found unconscious, but recovered.

The Whelans purchased a new refrigerator yesterday and put the old one in the basement.

Postlude

Faust Sung By Columbia Opera Group

By Paul Hume

AVAILABLE: the makings of a good local opera company.

Reason: the director of 12 years is leaving for Detroit.

Assets: a fine chorus trained in singing opera with enthusiasm, style, and in English; solo singers able to handle all types of roles up to and including the leading parts in lyric scores; audiences built up in 12 years of seeing well routined performances of light and grand opera.

Liabilities: location in a city known for its lack of adequate theater and concert facilities, a city without sufficient public spirit and determination to acquire these in some modest but satisfactory manner.

This is the Columbia Opera Co., directed for the past dozen years by Ethyl Manning. Last night the company presented Gounod's Faust in Lisner Auditorium. The performance will be repeated tonight.

The performance had good and bad aspects of a good amateur company: singers trained to sing but not act; able to handle much of Gounod's music with sympathy; a chorus of young voices full of spirit, able to sing any opera when properly trained.

Next to the fine chorus danced a beautiful ballet directed by Lisa Gardiner and Mary Day, representing the Washington School of the Ballet.

For ease of singing and fine stage manner, John Walser, as Valentine, was the evening's star. He is a polished vocalist with fine English diction. Maria de la Hull is an attractive looking Marguerite with proper vocal timbre for the part. She sings with little tonal variety but fine style. Both she and Rod Clay had trouble with the agile moments of their roles. Modern singers so often neglect scales!

Clay looked well as Mephistopheles and has a sonorous voice well suited to the part. He must learn to control it in motion as well as on sustained tones. The action of the part was a trifle stiff but it is with any singer until he is at home in it through repeated rehearsals.

Lewis Rose often sounded well as Faust but his voice is light for much of the part and he is not accurate in notes, especially in recitative passages. The important matter at present is the future of the company.

If a director versed in opera can take over, the company is full of promise. It has a fine chorus and good soloists. It must acquire a skilled stage manager. Last night's lighting was often poor and stage cues missed fire. The chorus must be helped to animate itself on stage. Solo singers need acting coaching.

A business manager must take over the work Mrs. Manning has been doing free. Performances must be given with orchestra minus piano if a professional tone is desired. Yet there is much good in this group and it would be another cultural lapse if Washington allowed it to die following its director's generous years of service.

Who wants an opera company?

'Point Four' Hearing Warned About Danger of Sweat Shops

By the United Press

Representative Helen Gahagan Douglas (D., Calif.) warned yesterday against sweat shops under President Truman's "Point 4" plan for underdeveloped areas of the world.

She told the House Foreign Affairs Committee that any plan to export industrial know-how should include safeguards against exploitation of labor.

"Unless we show workers in these countries how to organize and raise their level of wages so they can be consumers of goods they produce," she said, "then the overseas industrial output we create will be thrown into competition with American-made goods.

"We can't permit private industry to go into these countries with the aim of capitalizing on low-wage levels. If sweat shop conditions develop it will provide a fertile field for communism.

"At the same time, it will throw low-cost foreign goods on the American market to compete with domestic labor and industry."

Representative Omar Burleson (D., Tex.) feared organization of labor in some countries might make private industry reluctant to make investments abroad.

The committee is considering a bill to authorize the United States to furnish technical assistance to raise the economic and social standards of backward areas.

Secretary of Interior Julius A. Krug said he believed the technical aid program "can substantially aid our own economy and at the same time raise the standard of living abroad."

Assistant Secretary of Labor Philip M. Kaiser said there must be safeguards to see that the benefits of such a program reach "the mass of people" lest they have nothing to rely on "except the false promise of communism."

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

This Is What You Might Call a Nutty Story

Laura V. Montgomery, the public stenographer at the Willard Hotel, assures me that this actually happened.

The gentleman who was "holding up" the White House fence was somewhat inebriated. But the squirrel who approached in search of a peanut didn't seem to mind.

To squirrels, a human at the fence always looks like a soft touch.

When the drunk noticed his little friend sitting up and begging, he fished in his pocket and came up with a quarter. Tossing the coin to the squirrel, he murmured:

"There y'are, pal. Go get yourself a whole sack full."

SUCKER GAME

Wherever I go these days, I see football fans poring over their selections for the Saturday grid pools. Hope springs eternal, and everybody dreams of the day he's going to make a killing.

But it might be well for the bettors to review the odds they're offered, and compare them with the actual odds against winning.

It won't take much research to prove that most of the money which is wagered each Saturday remains in the pockets of the bookmakers. Only a small percentage is paid out in "hits."

Here's how it works. Each team either spots, or is spotted, a given number of points to make each contest an even-money wager. Then the player is invited to pick a card of from three to 10 winners.

For picking three out of three, the odds offered are 4 to 1 (5 "for" 1). But the mathematical odds against hitting three even-money shots are 7 to 1.

What it amounts to is that the bookmaker keeps $30 of each $80 bet, or 37½ percent.

If the player tries to pick more games, to get greater odds, he actually decreases his own chances, and increases the bookmaker's "take."

On seven selections the usual payoff is 39 to 1. But the mathematical odds are 127 to 1. So the bookmaker keeps 69 percent of all the wagers he handles on this proposition.

On 10 games they pay 199 to 1. The actual odds are 1023 to 1 that you can't guess 10 right. The bookmaker's "edge" is a mere 80 percent.

And the worst of it is that every time there's a tie, the bookies clean up—because the player loses all ties.

In fact, there's a shorter way to write this whole item. The player loses—period.

Dear Bill:

Enclosed find the price of a soda, in settlement of our wager. Your Cincinnati Reds were lucky enough to finish one game out of the cellar this year, so they beat our Nats. But as Wondrous Herb Heft would put it —"Wait till next year."

Henry M. Lesser
5921 14th st. nw.

Dear Herb:

I broke even on the season. I won a soda from you, but lost one to another reader whom I bet that the Nats would not finish last.

I think the best way to settle the whole transaction is to send all the soda money to Children's Hospital. That way everybody wins. Bill.

TOUJOURS GAI

Alden H. Ryan of 910 Enderby dr., Alexandria, Va., "pays" for a Give-Away item run here recently by putting a new twist to a fine old story.

It concerns the days of the Indian wars, when a man came crawling to a frontier settlement, gasping his last, with an arrow protruding from his neck.

"What happened?" exclaimed the shocked settlers. "Who did all this to you?" The wounded man smiled wanly, and told them his story.

"I'm not complaining," he whispered. "The Indians attacked my home, scalped my wife, kidnapped my children, burned my cabin and left me for dead. I've crawled for 10 days to get here. But I'm not complaining."

"You're a good man," pronounced one of the settlers. "But doesn't that arrow protruding from your neck hurt you?"

"No," replied the wounded one. "Only when I laugh."

The Lyons Den

By Leonard Lyons

TOKYO: The first cigarette came from Prime Minister Yoshida, who was entertaining in the large sunroom overlooking the terrace and the garden pools of his home. "I hate American newspapermen," was Yoshida's first statement, "because they pin labels on people. They call me an Ultraconservative." The Prime Minister was challenged to name those more conservative than he." He sucked in his breath and tittered: "They've been purged."

Yoshida then offered us cigarettes, and bowed and started dictating his official statement: "Through the kindness of your Government and the thoughtful leadership of General MacArthur, Japan has . . . the magnificent leadership of General MacArthur" . . . I started to light the cigarette and his daughter, Mrs. Aso, stopped me. "Take it, but don't smoke it," Mrs. Aso warned me. "They're good only for people who want to stop smoking. One puff—and you'll never want to smoke again."

She saw Mrs. Nan Tucker McEvoy searching for an ashtray. "Oh, just throw it on the terrace floor," Mrs. Aso told her. "There's lipstick on it, so they won't know whether you're to blame, or I." Then she led me to the pond in the garden to photograph the flowers. "I do hope that when your friends see the movies you're taking, they won't get a wrong impression," said Mrs. Aso. "It's not fair, these days, to show pictures of Japanese festivals and gay costumes and beauty spots in Tokyo. Such pictures alone, without the others, may fool tourists into wanting to come here, thinking that this is what it's like. They'll be disappointed."

The second cigarette came from Prince Takamatsu, brother of the Emperor, and the tea from his radiant, kimona-clad wife. Their home seemed twin to the Prime Minister's. They spoke of their honeymoon trip to America, when they had visited New York and the Japanese fishermen in Del Monte, Calif., and the prince sighed when mention was made of another trip. "No comment," he said, and then added a reminder that his desires to travel are necessarily curbed by the Occupation Powers. He sat languidly, while the princess poured tea. Again he offered cigarettes, each stamped with the 14-leaf Imperial Crest. I accepted it, and offered him one from my pack. "American cigarettes?" said Prince Takamatsu. "No, thanks. I don't smoke."

U. S. Losing Cargo Plane Lead

By Drew Pearson

The aviation industry isn't advertising it, but the United States is about to lose its superiority in the manufacture of commercial airplanes.

PEARSON

For years, American-built planes have been used by the French, the Dutch, even the British. The familiar DC types "made in America" have been used by every commercial airline in the world, from Burma to Patagonia. But that day is about to pass.

The British are now ahead of us in commercial airplane design, while the Swedes are about even and will surpass us soon.

Alert Undersecretary of Commerce C. V. Whitney has been visiting England to investigate British commercial air superiority and is reporting that the British already have a jet-propelled transport plane far ahead of anything ever started in the U. S. A.

The reason for the slump in commercial airplane design is that the Republican Eightieth Congress objected to Army funds being used for development of commercial planes. Hitherto, U. S. transport planes have been designed by Air Force funds used in cooperation with commercial companies. Now that money is cut off, and the big airplane manufacturers aren't designing new types.

Note—Both private industry and such GOP leaders as John Foster Dulles and Guy Gabrielson have been yelling about "statism." But when Government money is cut off from the aviation industry, it falls behind the rest of the world, and airplane manufacturers, most of them Republicans, want back the "statism" money cut off by the Eightieth Congress.

Cardinal Spellman's Trip

Prior to Cardinal Spellman's flight to the Vatican, it was authoritatively reported among the Catholic hierarchy that Spellman had lost his onetime position as favorite of his holiness.

Those who have visited at the Vatican during and since Cardinal Spellman's dispute with Mrs. Roosevelt report that the Pope was not pleased over Spellman's outburst and that this was the chief reason why the Cardinal later called on Mrs. Roosevelt at Hyde Park.

At one time Spellman was considered in line to be papal secretary and perhaps the first American Pope in history. But now it's reported inside the hierarchy that among the American Cardinals, Cardinal Stritch of Chicago is more in favor at the Vatican.

Note—When the newly named American cardinals-designate flew to Rome to receive their red hats, Spellman was the only one kissed by the Pope, which caused Cardinal Glennon of St. Louis to remark: "I hear Spellman wants to be papal secretary. He'll have us all in hot water."

'5 Percenter' Hearings Not Closed, Says Hoey

Senator Clyde R. Hoey (D., N. C.) yesterday denied that the "five percenter" hearings had been closed as stated by Drew Pearson in his column yesterday.

The Senator said the subcommittee he heads still wants to hear the testimony of James V. Hunt and David Bennett, both of whom are too ill to testify now.

He also denied the charge that pressure had been applied from the White House. "I have never even talked the matter over with President Truman," he said.

As to the "sensational leads" which Pearson said were glossed over, Senator Hoey said the charge was "fiction."

Concerning Bennett's yachts bought from the Government, Hoey said investigation showed they were purchased in competitive bidding, and not in non-competitive bidding as alleged.

The Gallup Poll

Voters Hold Disabled Men Work Best

By George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

Princeton, N. J., Oct. 7.—Physically handicapped people are likely to make better workers than those not handicapped, in the opinion of a large majority of persons interviewed on the subject in a Nation-wide survey by the American Institute of Public Opinion.

The survey, which was made in conjunction with National Employ the Physically Handicapped Week, October 2-8, showed that favorable regard for physically handicapped workers is widespread through all occupation groups.

Here is the result of the survey:

"In general, do you think a physically handicapped (disabled) person in a suitable job is likely to be a better worker or a poorer worker than a person who is not handicapped?"

Better	66%
Poorer	7
About the same	22
No opinion	5

A companion question in the survey approached the subject in a somewhat different way, as follows:

"If you were an employer,—say, in a factory—would you have any objections to hiring a person who was physically handicapped (disabled), but otherwise qualified for the job?"

The vote:

Yes, would have objections	10%
No, would have no objections	88
No opinion	2
